Work, the Real Thing.
Who'll Equal Lindbergh?
The Age of Opportunity.
Let Sam Remember Plato.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1928.)

WORK is the real thing so the real new year begins tomorrow. There is still time to patch a broken resolution or change a poor one. The big event of the dead year, in public opinion and imagination, was Lindbergh's flight to Paris. One year ago, no one knew Lindbergh. One year hence some young man, now unknown, will be the man of the hour. It is a matter of work and will power.

THE big political event of 1927 was President Coolidge's "I Do Not Choose." The big political event this year will be choosing two men that will choose to run.

THE overwhelming feature of 1927 was prosperity spelt with gigantic capital letters. The magic word promises to run through 1928 and on beyond. National common sense can make it so. Every sound thing in this country becomes more valuable each year. Everything becomes, values, opportunities, real estate, industry. The young man of this year has before him chances unknown to former times. He that has eyes let him see and then work. Seeing is not enough.

ASK the E. I. Du Pont De Nemours Company about the possibilities of financial gain in "the good old U. S. A." Ten years ago, that company invested $56,250,000 in stock of the General Motors Company. Today that stock is worth $550,000,000, nearly ten times what it cost. And in 1927 it paid stockholders in the Du Pont Company about $70,000,000. Such things can be done in this land of opportunity.

"AH," says foolish youth, "but Du Pont had $56,250,000 to invest. I have not got that. Why talk to me of opportunity?" Henry Ford did not have that sum a few years ago, either. He was earning $100 a month as a watchman. But while he watched, he thought. He got a good idea, stuck to it, carried it out. He's richer than Du Pont. And 25 years hence some one will be richer than he and get the money out of an idea, out of some corner of the brain, smaller than the head of a pin. Cultivate your brain. Keep it working.

IN national progress, the great thing to hope and work for is the building of great waterways, from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic and the Gulf, and the development of water power, especially the use for power and irrigation of the Colorado. Write to your two Senators and your congressman about that, and if you do nothing else, your year will not be wasted.

THE big things in industry, for 1928, is the tremendous boom and progress in automobile building. Greater values, power and speed than ever will be offered by great competing companies, and the public gets the benefit of the genuine competition. It is expected that 5,000,000 new automobiles will be built this year. Be sure to get yours. If a man's time is worth anything, a car, intelligently used, will double its value. If his time is worth nothing, he might as well drive around, and see what other people are doing. Get your car anyway.

MORE important than everything else is safety. Carthage, three thousand years ago, had everything we have, the times considered, gold, trade, power, prosperity. She had quite recently told Rome just where Rome might trade in the Mediterranean, and how far her ships could go.

THEN came the blow from Rome that old Cato had been urging, with his eternal tiresome and "damned" reiteration, "Carthage must be destroyed." Carthage was destroyed, razed to the ground, wiped out, the site of the great city ploughed over, and salt scattered over the ground, that grass might not grow there. Archeologists are now digging up the ruins of the great Semitic city.

THAT will not happen to our cities, it would take too much salt. But wealth is dangerous, if not defended, and ours is as defenseless as it is conspicuous. WE NEED A GREAT FIGHTING AIR FLEET, three times as big as any in the world, to protect our two coast lines, against Europe and Asia.

THAT'S as tiresome as Cato's remark, but as necessary. Fortunately there are faint indications that some one in our government has heard about the invention of the Wright Brothers. Our Navy is providing each battleship with three or more planes, carried on board, and shot from the deck by a catapulting mechanism moved by compressed air.

WILL ROGERS, who seems to try everything, like the little boy at Thanksgiving dinner, tried a ride via the Catapult, and from a standing start he and the plane were going 60 miles an hour at the end of a 60-foot run on the ship deck. Even Jules Verne would have hesitated to predict that, and we have built great plane-carrying ships, to take airships out to sea as a mother opossum carries her young. When the next war comes, all battleships, except swift convoys for merchantmen, will be left in port. Airships will fly out alone, and heaven help merchantmen and convoys. The only safe troopships or merchantmen will be huge submarines.

THUS FAR, we are safe, free and rich. Europe has had enough of war, for the present. It would cost more than the 10 billions she owes us, to wipe the debt out by force. Asia is busy at home, and those powerful enough to move, know that attack on this continent would be suicide.

BUT it will not be so always. Aircraft improvement in the next 10 years as great as in the

KILL 5 MARINES IN NICARAGUA

BROOKLINE MAN IS SHOT

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 2. — (AP.)—United States marines were engaged today in a bitter campaign against rebels led by Gen. Augustino Sandino after a sanguinary battle in which five marines were killed and 22 were wounded.

The marines, operating with the Nicaraguan national guardsmen, drove the rebels from the Sandino headquarters near Quilali, a few miles south of the Honduran border, Friday. The rebels, informed by spies of the marine advance, were fully prepared to meet the attack and the patrol was forced to defeat a thoroughly trained and well equipped force of 500 insurgents to gain their objective.

FACE MACHINE GUN FIRE

It is regarded as certain that Sandino is receiving outside aid because his men are better equipped and armed than heretofore. Marine headquarters were informed that the conduct of the rebels in battle was greatly improved and that the men carried both machine guns and rifles.

It was estimated that for every marine casualty there were 10 among the rebels, which would put the rebel dead around 50 and the wounded near 220. Since Sandino's men removed their dead and wounded to save them from vultures the exact number of rebel

NEW YEAR DRINKING KILLS 3

Three persons are dead, including a husband and wife, as a result of drinking liquor with which they hoped to celebrate the New Year, according to reports to the coroner. The victims are Frank Vetterly, 52, and his wife Dolly, 48, of 8 Black way, and Henry Lytle, 65, of 8 Baxter way. Two persons are under arrest in connection with the death of the Vetterlys.

The couple died in the Allegheny General Hospital yesterday, a short time after the husband told police they had been drinking wintergreen coloring, bought from a boy who stole it from another roomer at the Black way address. Nick Yozzo, of 8 Black way, and Joseph Lapasoto, of 108 East General Robinson street, were arrested by police tracing the source of the liquor.

Lytle died from a fractured skull, suffered when he fell down a flight of stairs in his home yesterday. Police say that he had been drinking moonshine liquor and was stupefied at the time of the fall.

6 DEAD IN MANHATTAN

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Six deaths in Manhattan New Year's Eve were attributed to drinking bad liquor. Liquor was officially credited with a large part in half a dozen other deaths.

Three of the deaths were those of men who had been killed in fights. Another man, half crazed with the poisonous whisky he had imbibed, cut his throat and leaped out of a six-story window.

Other drunken merrymakers were struck by motor cars as they reeled around the streets.

The chief medical examiner explained tonight:

"There was a flood of liquor last night. Tomorrow, however, will tell the story."

At police headquarters there were more motor car collisions than ever reported before in the city's history.

Added crimes have been laid to the door of "The Fox," William Edward Hickman, 19-year-old Los Angeles killer, as police investigate his career prior to his brutal slaying of Marian Parker, 12, daughter of a bank official who once caused his arrest for forgery. Among the crimes admitted by Hickman is the robbery and murder of C. Ivy Thoms, Los Angeles druggist. Photographs rushed from Los Angeles by A. T. & T. telephoto service shows Thoms and his widow.

Two Girls Swallow Poison

Two girls who swallowed iodine Saturday night as a way out of their troubles, will recover to find difficulties multiplied.

Mildred Landman, 19, of Yale avenue, West View, arrested recently on a forgery charge, was sent to Allegheny General Hospital after she had taken poison. She told police she did not care to appear in court to answer that charge.

Wilhelmina Cunningham, 19, of 1912 Rhine street, recent arrival from Ireland, swallowed poison and arrived at the hospital about the same time as Miss Landman.

Police charged both with disorderly conduct.

Fires Put Families Out

Early morning fires today forced members of a dozen families to the streets in night clothing, causing severe st[illegible]ing to scores, and resulted in many homes, stores and business houses being damaged. A number of those forced out were cared for in police and engine houses or in th[illegible]omes of neighbors and f[illegible].

In Woods Run three families were driven to the street when a fire, that started in a garage at 32 Carver way, damaged nearby frame houses in Preble avenue and Carver way. The garage was destroyed, as were two automobiles

ZONING APPROVED, 1927 REPORT SAYS

Enforcement of the zoning ordinance is meeting with popular approval, the Board of Adjustment states in its annual report to Mayor Charles H. Kline, which was made public today. The people are desirous of excluding from the neighborhoods in which they live structures which may cheapen the value of the property or impair its attractiveness.

Accordingly on petition of property owners eight residential districts were set up in Pittsburgh last year in which only single family dwellings are permitted, whereas when the ordinance was enacted in 1923 duplexes and double houses were allowed in residential districts of the highest class.

Significant also, the board points out, is the acclaim with which its decision barring an electric signboard from Mount Washington—a decision sustained by the Pennsyl-

COAST BETTING PICKS PITT

PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 2.—(AP.)—A powerful and unbeaten Pittsburgh University football team, coached by Jock Sutherland and led and inspired by Capt. Gibby Welch, today squared off against Pop Warner's Stanford Cardinals for the annual Tournament of Roses gridiron clash.

It was to be a battle of many contests rolled into one. Pupil opposed teacher; East arrayed itself against West and Pittsburgh stood before Stanford in this thirteenth annual Tournament of Roses gridiron contest. Incidentally, it was to provide the fans with the spectacle of seeing Warner's system pitted against itself. Sutherland 10 years ago was pupil of Warner and still calls on the tricks imported to him by the "master coach."

The third attempt of Stanford to win a tournament game found many opinions prevalent. The betting fraternity favored the Easterners. The great record of the Panthers in not losing a game,

2 DEAD, FIRES RAGE

As the winter's most severe cold wave weakened very slightly during the night and this morning, a general checkup of its effect in the Pittsburgh district showed two dead, a dozen families driven out of their homes by fires caused indirectly by cold, intense suffering among the poor, gas shortage in thousands of homes and a general slowup of all forms of traffic.

Accentuated by a 36-mile wind the cold wave which kept the thermometer hovering around zero for 24 hours began gradually to relinquish its grip early this morning. By 10 o'clock the temperature had reached 5 degrees above zero, but the rise was slow and it was predicted that the maximum for the day would not be above 10 degrees.

Slightly warmer weather is expected tomorrow.

Frank Baden, 53, a Negro coal miner, was found frozen to death early yesterday at the Gould mine, Baldwin township. It is believed he became ill and froze when he sat down to rest.

Robert C. Miller, 23, of 603 Stoinson street, Detroit, Mich., was found frozen to death beside the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks at Bessemer. It is believed he was blown or fell from the roof of a moving freight car.

The most severe gas shortage was reported in the North Boroughs district. Many families in the West View, Bellevue and Ross township district found difficulty in preparing meals because of the shortage.

Although many trains and street cars were delayed slightly by the cold, there were no serious breakdowns of traffic in public service traffic arteries, but hundreds of Sunday motorists were stranded by radiator, brake and motor troubles.

Walsh Tag Leniency Rapped

Supt. of Police Peter P. Walsh had no authority, the State Highway Patrol declared today to grant two days grace to motorists delinquent in obtaining 1928 license plates. Notwithstanding his gesture of leniency, drivers who operate today with 1927 tags will do so at their own risk, for the state patrolmen will not hesitate, they said, to come into the city and arrest offenders.

It was recalled at Wilkinsb[illegible]

TROOPS JOIN IN HUNT FOR FIEND

POLICE "GO EASY" ON NEW SPEED LAW

No arrests for violations of the new motor vehicle law, which went into effect yesterday, had been reported by police of the city or surrounding municipalities.

Traffic officers apparently were "going easy" until they, as well as motorists, become more familiar with the new regulations which include a complicated speed schedule varying from 10 to 35 miles an hour.

The 35-mile speed is now permitted on open highways and boulevards. Twenty miles is the maximum speed permitted in business and residence districts. Speed must be cut to 20 miles an hour also when approaching within 200 feet of a grade crossing or steam or electric railway crossing. Ten miles an hour is the maximum permissible speed while passing a street car safety zone while a car is stopped.

When passing a school house during a recess or noontime period or when children are going to or leaving school, speed must be cut to 15 miles an hour.

casualties will probably never be learned.

The marines suffered the heaviest casualties since American forces were landed in Nicaragua more than a year ago.

A marine reinforcement numbering 200 men with a pack train of 200 mules, carrying supplies and ammunition was on its way today from Ocotal and Telpaneca to Quilali.

Sandino, who has been repudiated by leaders of the Liberal party, the official opposition to the government, had known for several weeks that the marines were preparing to make a drive on Quilali. He made extensive preparations to resist them with a picked force of 500 men.

Gen. Sandino fortified his forces on the outskirts of Quilali on the only trail leading into the town. This trail is mountainous, rocky and heavily timbered. The marines knew that in order to capture the town the rebels would have to be driven out from the road.

CAUGHT IN AMBUSH

As the marines were ascending the mountainous trail, Sandino's men opened fire on them from their hiding places along the road. The slightly wounded were injured by bursting bombs.

Capt. Livingston, who was in command, fell seriously wounded. Lieut. Gould, who was later slightly wounded, immediately took command.

By desperate and hard fighting the marines dislodged the rebels. Airplanes aided them, but were not effective as previously, since Sandino had scattered his men instead of grouping them.

After dispersing the rebels, the marines pushed on toward Quilali. Sandino had told his followers that the second time he met the marines he would emerge victorious. The defeat at Ocotal last July when one marine and 200 rebels were killed and 100 rebels wounded, still rankled. The rebel leader had boasted that he could never be driven from his mountainous and almost inaccessible fastness.

The occupation of Quilali forced him to shift his headquarters to El Chipote, 18 miles from the captured town. El Chipote is near the Coco River, which will be used by the rebel leader as an avenue of escape if he is hard pressed. The river empties into the Atlantic at Cabo Gracias. Once on the river escape would be comparatively easy as the stream flows through an unexplored wilderness.

MORE MARINES ON WAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—More marines were under sailing orders today for Nicaragua, a battleground that for years has claimed the blood of Americans and natives who have clashed in pitched battle.

Orders for five officers and 150 marines to sail from New York soon on the Chateau Thierry, evidently issued some days ago, were made public late last night at marine headquarters on the heels of news that the corps had suffered the most serious battle losses of its long Nicaraguan campaign—five dead and 19 wounded in an engagement Friday with rebels commanded by Gen. Sandino.

FAMILY IN BROOKLINE

Lieut. William T. Minnick of the United States Marines, who was wounded during a skirmish between the Marines and several hundred rebels at Quilili, Nicaragua, is a resident of Brookline, living at 363 Berkshire avenue.

The official report lists Lieut. Minnick as slightly wounded by fragments of bomb.

Lieut. Minnick's wife and his daughter, Mrs. J. Russell Craig, are living at the Brookline address with the daughter's husband. Lieut. Minnick is a physician-surgeon of the Medical Corps of the United States Navy. He came to the Pittsburgh district three years ago as a medical examiner for the Navy and Marine headquarters. Two months ago he left here to join the forces in Central America.

A letter was received from Mr. Minnick several days ago in which he wrote he and a group of other medical officers would start for Mantagalpa to establish a hospital station there. Lieut. Minnick was the first naval medical officer to reach the scene of the Shenandoah disaster at Ava, O., going there from Pittsburgh. Before coming here he was stationed at Philadelphia.

Woman Minister Barred Because She Smokes

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Because she sometimes smokes cigarets, Maude Royden's engagement to deliver a religious lecture before the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Chicago, February 12, has been cancelled by the society.

William B. Perkins, manager for the lecture tour of Miss Royden, British woman minister, now en route to America, said Mrs. Dan B. Brummit, wife of Representative Brummit of Evanston, Ill., had cancelled the date some weeks ago and had made it plain that the only reason was the fact that Miss Royden sometimes smokes.

The Boston branch of the same society also has cancelled its engagement for a lecture by Miss Royden on the ground that she advocated companionate marriage.

People Pay $4.09 Each To Support Police

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—It cost every person in the 250 principal cities of the United States $4.09 each for police protection in 1926, the Commerce Department announces.

Police department maintenance in cities of over 30,000 population has about doubled since 1916, the report said, for in that year it was $2.19 per person.

The report, however, pointed out that this increase does not necessarily mean that crime has doubled increased compensation to police men and large additions to police forces to direct traffic is responsible for a good portion of the increase.

At present the cost of police departments represents 10.4 per cent of the total expenditure for maintenance and operation of city government. It is next in importance to that expended for schools, which constitute 37 per cent of city expenditures.

Appropriations for general courts, superior courts and correctional institutions also doubled over such costs in 1916, the report revealed.

In cities of a half million or over population police maintenance was 5.45 per capita, as compared with $2.84 in 1916. The cost ranged downward to cities between 30,000 and 50,000, in which the cost was 2.25 per capita as compared with 1.16 in 1916.

and a truck. The damage was estimated at $10,000.

Mrs. Pauline Rajsak, a widow, and her six children, who reside on the second floor of a three-story frame dwelling at 3017 Preble avenue, were forced out when the flames from the burning garage in the rear spread to the rear of her home. Her children, Michael, 15; Joseph, 10; Mary, 13; Margaret, 8; Emma, 6, and Frank, 5, were cared for at No. 45 Engine Company across Preble avenue from her home. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reido, on the third floor, also were cared for at the engine house.

Mrs. Mary Jones, 17, ill in the home of her mother in Carver way, was carried to the street by her husband, John, when the house was filled with smoke and threatened by the flames. The mother, Mrs. Eva Tomosko, and her husband, Alex, and seven other children also left the house.

The house in Carver way was one of a row of seven that for a time were in danger. The poolroom of Jack Insley, 3015 Preble avenue, was damaged, as were houses at 3019 and 3013 Preble avenue.

Eight were forced from their home by an East End fire early today in the combination confectionery store and residence of Thomas Mudge, 4568 Carroll street. Mudge, his wife and six children fled and are being cared for at the home of a neighbor. Damage was estimated at $2,000.

A score of persons were forced from a four-story apartment house at 649-10 Logan street when fire in a confectionery store on the first floor threatened to spread to other parts of the building. Damage was estimated at $700.

Last night the Clairton Episcopal Church was damaged to the extent of $2,500 by fire believed to have been caused by an overheated furnace, which started shortly after the evening service had ended.

The home of Frank J. Pahler, 812 Climax street, was damaged by fire yesterday. An overheated gas stove is believed to have started the blaze, which caused $1,000 damage. The family was away.

Eight automobiles in the garage of the John B. Drew estate in Semicir street, near Perrysville avenue, were damaged yesterday and the garage partially destroyed by fire of undetermined origin. Damage was estimated at $10,500.

headquarters of the state highway patrol, 1112 South avenue, that Walsh granted a period of grace last New Year's, but the fact did not deter the state officers from making arrests within the city limits. They took about 150 persons into custody during the period in which, under Walsh's decree, they were supposedly immune.

About 25 persons were arrested yesterday by state highway patrolmen with headquarters at Wilkinsburg for driving without 1928 license. Fifty were arrested early in the morning in the Greensburg neighborhood for the same offense. State patrolmen at Washington arrested 11.

WE ought to get ready for that, remembering what happened to Carthage, to Crocsus, who stood crying aloud on the bonfire and what happens to any fat groceryman sitting at his front door with cash back of him, forgetting the holdup men, or saying, "They would not dare touch me." Uncle Sam begins 1928 giving an execellent imitation of that grocer.

COMPANY H TO AVENGE GIRL

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 2.—Members of Company H, One Hundred and Tenth Infantry, Twenty-eighth Division, one of Pennsylvania's most famous military units, were urged today by Capt. Raymond E. Goodridge, commanding officer, to join in the hunt for the murder of Thelma Young, aged 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Young, of 63 Altanfont avenue, Bellevue, a suburb of this city.

Clyde C. Young, brother of the dead girl, is enrolled in Company H, the members of which held a banquet at the armory here this afternoon. More than 50 of the 65 members were in attendance.

SPURS MAN HUNT

"Men, a sister of one of your comrades has been slain by a fiend, who is still at large, a menace to lives of your own mothers, sisters, sweethearts and wives," said Capt. Goodridge.

"It is up to us to join in the hunt for this fiend and if any of you secure information that even slightly suggests a clue in this revolting crime that has stirred the entire city, it is your duty as soldiers and citizens to inform the proper authorities at once."

One of the many floral tributes sent to the home of the parents was from the officers and members of Company H.

NEGRO'S ALIBI HOLDS

Fred Drew, aged 20, Negro suspect, arrested a few minutes after the blood-smeared body had been found, is still being held by the authorities but a complete check has established an alibi for him.

According to his story, Drew went to Canonsburg Thursday night to practice basketball, did not return to Washington until about 10 o'clock and started for his home from a restaurant in North Lincoln street about 11 o'clock. These facts have been substantiated.

A check of Miss Young's movements on the night she was slain show that she was seen crossing the Pennsylvania Railroad. At the foot of West Wheeling street, only a short distance from the spot where her body was found at 10:05 o'clock.

Miss Young was undoubtedly en route to her home at that hour and would have arrived in the dark bypath, a short cut to her home, about three minutes later.

SLAIN HOUR EARLIER

Ascertaining of these facts tends to prove that the girl was slain fully an hour earlier than at first indicated, as information hastily gathered tended to place her at the scene of the crime about 11 o'clock.

Friends and relatives of the dead girl denied that the bar pin found on Drew's clothing at the time he was in custody belonged to her. The button found on his person did not come off the clothing she wore at the time.

With Drew not considered as a suspect, the authorities are broadening their search for the slayer. Every person known to have the slightest information that might prove of value is being questioned.

Police Rush Scatters Mob At Hanging Effigy of 'Fox'

THEATER'S "STUNT" BLAMED

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2—Sheriff's deputies last night dispersed a mob of several hundred attracted by an effigy of William Edward Hickman, Marian Parker's slayer, from the sign of a Mexican theater in Belvedere Gardens.

The deputies reported that the effigy had been placed for exploitation in connection with the showing of motion pictures dealing with the case. They ordered the effigy removed.

Several squads of deputies had been rushed to the scene on receipt of reports that a mob was hanging Hickman in effigy.

By Associated Press.

Prosecuting officers, believing they must combat a plea of insanity in their efforts to convict Hickman, today began laying new plans for the trial.

Meanwhile, they continued to dig into the unexplained phases of the case, one of which they say is the discovery that Hickman entertained a woman in his apartment on the day the little girl was killed.

The mystery of the visit to Hickman's cell yesterday of three strangers, accompanied by his counsel, Jerome Walsh of Kansas City, was regarded by the prosecutors as showing that further moves were being made toward constructing a defense basis of insanity. Although Walsh declared the three men are making a private investigation of Hickman's activities and the three other men insisted on concealing their identities, it was learned that one was a physician. Walsh insisted they were not alienists.

DARBY TURNS TRAITOR

PATROLMAN CHEETHAM AND DARBY

For 10 years Mounted Patrolman William Cheetham has ridden "Darby" through the trials and tribuation of police horse duty. Always "Darby" would stand quietly for hours, never straying an inch, while his rider worked through the downtown districts. Always—until the last few weeks. Now if Cheetham leaves "Darby" standing by the curb, while he tags automobiles or does other of his daily tasks, he finds the horse gone when he returns. Sometimes it's in the barn, Cheetham will find him, and sometimes in front of the Philadelphia Company Building. Cheetham says it's because the girls of the Philadelphia Company fed "Darby" apples during apple week, but "Darby" himself says it's because his master insists on tagging cars owned by Sun-Tele employes no matter where they park them.

STATE HELD IN FRIGID GRASP

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Heavy snows and a cold snap which threatened the lowest temperatures of the season today had Northern Pennsylvania and New York state in its frigid grasp.

In Erie, Pa., from four to five feet of snow paralyzed traffic.

In Wilkes-Barre one death was attributed to the cold weather, a resident being found dead on the porch of his home.

In the southern portions of New York state, including New York City, biting winds and cold clear weather prevailed, but northern counties had the added complication of blizzard conditions in several sections.

In upper Chautauqua county snow had fallen to a depth of three to four feet, while snow plows in all sections of the county were being run to keep roads open. At Jamestown there was a foot of snow.

In New York City, the municipal lodging house and havens maintained by philanthropic organizations were besieged by those seeking shelter. A child was killed when struck by a heavy scaffolding plank loosened by the gale.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—(INS.)—With 21 deaths in the Chicago district already attributed to the present cold wave, the city continued to shiver in zero temperature today, without any hope for immediate relief.

According to the latest government forecast bulletin, the frigid wave has not yet reached its climax here. The severe weather will continue today, the mercury dropping to 5 or 10 degrees below zero by tonight.

Moderation should begin late tomorrow or Wednesday, according to the forecast.

B. F. JONES, JR., CHAIRMAN OF J. & L. BOARD, DIES

STEEL CONCERN HEAD ILL 2 WEEKS

B. F. Jones, Jr., one of Pittsburgh's most prominent industrial leaders and chairman of the Board of Directors of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, died yesterday morning in his home in Ridge avenue, North Side. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Jones was ill less than two weeks and was in his office as late as December 17.

The corporation, of which he was the dominating head, had been in the steel business in Pittsburgh for more than three-quarters of a century, and was founded by his father, the late B. F. Jones. From small beginnings, it has grown until today, under the direction of Mr. Jones, it has become the second of the large independent steel companies in the United States; and it remains now unaffected by the combinations and consolidations which have taken place in the industry in the last 25 years, stamped with the personality of its founder and his son.

Immediately after his return from college in 1891, Mr. Jones entered the employ of Jones & Laughlins, Ltd., the name of the company at that time, as treasurer and a member of the board of managers. Four years before the death of his father, he became president of the company and continued as its head until the organization of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation in 1923, when he became chairman of the board, which office he held at the time of his death. He was an outstanding and dominant figure in the steel industry of America for more than a quarter of a century, and the name and reputation of his corporation was known throughout the world wherever steel was used.

Mr. Jones, like his father before him, who had been chairman of the Republican National Committee in 1884, was a Republican in politics, a staunch supporter of the party and its principles, having been chairman of the Electoral College of Pennsylvania in the presidential election of 1908.

He was born April 21, 1869, on the North Side, then the city of Allegheny, the son of Benjamin Franklin and Mary McMasters Jones. His early education was in private schools in Pittsburgh, from them to St. Paul's School at Concord, N. H., thence to Princeton College, graduating in the class of 1891.

He attended the First Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh and took an active, practical interest in charitable and welfare work, at the time of his death being a trustee both of the Allegheny General and Mercy Hospitals. He was also a director of the Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh and the National Union Fire Insurance Company.

He was a lover of art, his collection of paintings being among the notable ones of Pittsburgh.

Mr. Jones was a member of the Pittsburgh, Duquesne, Union and Allegheny Country clubs of Pittsburgh; the University, Princeton, Racquet and Tennis clubs of New York; the Union Club, Cleveland; Nassau Club, Princeton, N. J., and University Club, Chicago.

In 1892, Mr. Jones was married to Sue D. Dalzell, who survives him, together with his son, B. F. Jones III, and his daughter, Mrs. J. O. Burgwin; two grandchildren, Susan and Virginia Burgwin, and his sisters, Mrs. Alexander Laughlin, Jr., Mrs. Elizabeth M. Horne and Mrs. W. W. Willock, all of Pittsburgh.

ZONING IS APPROVED

vania Supreme Court—was greeted. The verdict in this case is declared to be "probably the greatest victory ever won against signboards anywhere in the country." Letters of congratulation have poured in from every quarter.

The board regards it as noteworthy, too, that the only two cases which it lost last year on appeal from its decisions to the courts were lost because it had authorized deviations from the zoning ordinance, and not because it had refused to grant concessions.

On the other hand, however, the Supreme Court upheld the board in a case in which its decision was that a variation should be granted in the terms of the ordinance, as is authorized by the law when in the board's opinion strict adherence to the letter of the measure will cause hardship.

The Zoning Board of Adjustment is composed of Wilmer M. Jacoby, chairman; J. W. Cree, Jr., and W. C. Rice, with Charles F. Miller as secretary-engineer.

Owing largely to the annexation of Knoxville, Carrick and Westwood, 1927 was the busiest year in the board's history. It handled 2,115 cases, as compared with 1,596 in 1926, an increase of about one-third.

Of these, 250 appeals were granted outright, 1,319 were granted with conditions, or changes in plans devised by the board; 325 were denied, 97 were withdrawn to avoid denials, and 24 were still pending at the end of the year. The board made 2,199 personal inspections of the premises involved in cases before it, no case being decided unless one or more members actually visited the site. Since the inception of the zoning ordinance the board has disposed of a total of 6,707 cases.

The board's report to the Mayor, after giving a detailed account of the disposition of cases before it, continues in part as follows:

"The most significant development with relation to zoning and the work of the Board of Adjustment in 1927 was two decisions of the State Supreme Court handed down on the same day affecting cases which arose at Pittsburgh. In both cases it sustained the decisions of the board. The Supreme Court, by its action in these two cases, placed its stamp of approval upon the work performed by the Board of Adjustment and the logic of the decisions which it renders.

"During this year 15 decisions of this board were appealed to the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny county. Of these 15 appeals, four were decided in favor of the board, two were lost, six are yet undecided, and three were compromised and did not come to a hearing. Of the six undecided cases, hearings have been held on two and four are yet to be heard by the court."

"During this year the ordinance has grown in greater favor with the owners of property, as shown by the fact that there were eight changes to a 'C' residence district, where only one-family dwellings are permitted. In addition, there were 15 changes from 'B' residence to 'A' residence, to permit the erection of apartments, rows and so forth; 13 changes from 'residence' to 'commercial' to permit the erection of small stores in districts where there were no store facilities at the time; and in addition to the changes above mentioned, there were two changes from 'residence' to 'light industrial,' both these changes being in districts which adjoined other 'light industrial' districts.

"There were three text amendments during 1927, two affecting the area regulations of the ordinance, and the third the height regulations. The most important was the one affecting the height regulations in the downtown and East Liberty business areas. Under the original regulations it was impossible to erect a building to a height exceeding 265 feet, whereas under the revised limits it is possible to build a building 265 feet in height and to erect additional stories above this limit to the extent of twice the width of the widest street abutting the building, provided the additional height be set back from the street line and the side lot lines. Under this new limit permits were issued for two of the largest office buildings ever erected in this city.

"The area changes were made necessary by a court decision which showed that there was an ambigious clause in the ordinance as originally drafted and which was not made clear until the decision by the court. The first of these changes was designed to clear up this ambiguity, which it did, but in addition thereto it affected two other sections of the ordinance, and the second amendment was passed to clarify these two later sections. Thus there were 38 changes in the same zone map and three changes in the text of the ordinance.

"The board has continued the practice, which was started early in its history, of meeting with prospective purchasers of property as well as with builders, for the purpose of advising them of possible or probable variations which the board would be inclined to grant, thereby saving the owner or purchasers time and expense in the making of plans or the refusal to purchase property which could not be used for the purpose for which it was to be bought. These meetings with the owners or purchasers have meant, quite frequently, that all of some members of the board would visit the location before an answer was given to the inquiries.

"While the board has handled almost half as many appeals during this year as during the three years and four months from its inception in September, 1923, until the first of 1927, we are proud of the record we have made in rendering the decisions promptly and not unnecessarily delaying builders. The great majority of the decisions are issued within two or three days of the date of the hearing, the only long delays being due to the failure of the applicants to present revised plans which the board has requested. In the matter of promptness, this board leads all other similar boards in the country."

BOMB WRECKS NEWSPAPER AT SCRANTON

By Universal Service.

SCRANTON, Pa., Jan. 2.—Three persons were injured and damage estimated at $50,000 caused when the building of the Scranton Sun, an afternoon newspaper in the heart of the business district, was bombed Sunday.

Police blamed the outrage on law violators in the lower valley against whom the newspaper has been waging an intensive campaign recently.

The blast ripped out the wall in the rear of the three-story Sun Building, swept through the composing, press and news department and shattered all windows in the front of the structure.

Two houses occupied by Negro families in the rear of the Sun office were wrecked by the bomb, and it was in one of these structures three persons were hurt. Hundreds of windows in more than a score of buildings were blown out.

William F. Hallsted II, editor of the Sun, stated that the explosion was an attack on the newspaper as an institution and not against any individual officer or employe. Hallsted said repairs could be made in time to publish the Sun without losing an issue.

The bombing of the newspaper was the ninth dynamite outrage in the past 19 months.

D.F.A. WHEELOCK DIES AT WARREN

WARREN, Pa., Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Col. D. F. A. Wheelock, 72, well-known Warren citizen and county surveyor for many years, died here last night.

Col. Wheelock, who was a veteran of the Spanish-American War and who served in a non-combatant capacity during the World War, was one of the organizers of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. He was a member of the national commission of administration of the organization and for five years was commander of the Warren post. Col. Wheelock also was prominent as a good roads booster.

He was born at Wheelock, Erie county, on July 22, 1855. He leaves his widow, a son and two daughters, Harry Wheelock and Mrs. Bertha E. Lyons, both of Warren, and Mrs. Winifred C. McCray, of Mannington, W. Va.

LINDY REACHES SAN SALVADOR

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh clicked off another lap of his Central America flight Sunday, leaving Belize, British Honduras, at 7:21 a. m., and arriving at San Salvador shortly after 11 o'clock, the State Department was advised.

The journey, although of but only 260 miles air-line, was one of the most hazardous of the Flying Colonel's schedule, air officials pointed out.

Lindbergh flew his "Spirit of St. Louis" out of a tiny polo field at Belize, clearing dangerous obstructions which fringed the field on all sides. He followed the coast line around the Gulf of Honduras, then struck overland over dense jungles and across lofty mountain ranges to the Pacific side of Central America and landed without incident.

OLDEST CHURCH IN MERCER CO. BURNS

MERCER, Pa., Jan. 2.—The First Presbyterian Church of Mercer, the oldest church in the county and one of the landmarks in this district, was destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. The loss will exceed $30,000, it is believed. The fire is thought to have originated from defective flues.

When the firemen arrived the church was almost hidden by dense smoke and they were unable to enter the building to fight the fire effectively. When the blaze subdued late in the afternoon the building had been gutted.

The church was erected in 1829 and has been remodeled several times. The congregation, organized in 1804, is the oldest in Western Pennsylvania.

The zero weather made it difficult for the firemen to fight the fire.

Titles have now been bestowed on all three of the Berry brothers, the most powerful newspaper publishers in Britain. Before the war they owned a few unimportant weeklies.

Rogers Wants Congress to Pass Gravy

WILL ROGERS

BEVERLYHILLS, Cal., Jan. 2—Secretary Mellon has asked Congress to please wait till after March fifteenth, when the new income taxes comes in, before passing any legislation, as he don't know how much there will be, if any. But Congress says, no, we are going to divide it up now, whether there is any to divide or not. What do you suppose we are in Congress for, if it ain't to split up the swag. Please pass the gravy.

UNION LABOR ASKS SUPPORT OF CAPITAL

By WILLIAM GREEN,
President, American Federation of Labor.
(Distributed by Universal Service.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Upon the very threshold of the New Year organized labor in the United States challenges the owners and management of industry to co-operate with it in the establishment and maintenance of sound economic standards and industrial peace.

We welcome the opportunity of giving our collective skill, training and technique to the development of industrial and individual efficiency. We believe that American living standards and national prosperity can be fostered only through the maintenance of a high industrial productivity level and a high and still higher mass purchasing power.

The real problem of the New Year will be that of financing commodity consumption. Not only must the consuming mass of people be encouraged to buy, but they must be financed to the point where they can buy freely.

How will the owners of industrial enterprises meet this challenge? Will they accept organized labor's offer of co-operation? Will they insist in the giving of new force and meaning to collective bargaining so that all concerned may think in terms of industrial peace and of the peaceful solution of industrial problems which affect the relationship of employers and employes?

Team work on the part of employers and employes is a very desirable thing, but before it can be practical reality there must be a will to work together and a frank recognition of and respect for each other's rights.

Opposition to the American Federation of Labor and its constituent parts through the organization of company unions, the use of court injunctions and the forced denial of the exercise of the right of employes to join the labor union of their choice tends to fan the flame of industrial hate and tends to widen the breach between employers and employes. Will those employers who have been pursuing such an opposition policy during the past continue to do so in the future?

The experience of the past can be repeated or a new era of industrial good-will can be ushered in. Corporations can experiment with company unions and various brands of welfare plans and in this way can oppose the standard, independent trade unions, as represented by the American Federation of Labor, or they can accept our offer of co-operation and service. Which shall it be? The answer must come from the employers of labor.

Short Talks by thoughtful mothers

A Wisconsin Mother says: "I find mothers very well informed on the subject of 'dope' in medicines. Few mothers nowadays would buy a preparation that contained opiates or chloroform. A glance at the package before buying tells her this. With Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, the name tells a true story. It is quickly effective for coughs, colds, croup and throat irritations. Pure as it is sure, and worth many times its price." Sold everywhere.

Former Bathing Beauty Now Known as One of Chief Home Destroyers in Screen Realm

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service
LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2.

IF YOU have any vision you can usually tell how a company regards its stars by the stories purchased for their leading lights. There need be no secret at Phyllis Haver's standing on the De Mille lot. First, "Chicago," one of the sensational plays of last year, was annexed, and now they tell me "Tenth Avenue" is to feature Miss Haver along about the middle of January.

New Yorkers know "Tenth Avenue" well. It was one of the popular crook melodramas of a year ago. Miss Haver, former Mack Sennett bathing beauty and now one of the chief home destroyers in celluloid, will play the role Edna Hibbard created on the stage.

Then, there are two members of the crook household equally important—paying guests of the male gender to be played by Joseph Schildkraut and Victor Varconi. William De Mille is to direct "Tenth Avenue."

Probably Frank Lloyd's best work was done for First National. Since he directed "The Sea Hawk" many waters have passed under the bridge and not always with a pleasant ripple for Mr. Lloyd. He has not approached "The Sea Hawk" by a long way, but he believes that he can repeat this performance and so does First National. That's why Watterson Rothacker, boss of the First National studios, signed Mr. Lloyd on a long-term contract. He will first direct Corinne Griffith in "The Divine Lady." After that he will make four pictures—two with stars and two of a special nature. Miss Griffith's return to First National is interesting. She chafed at the bit for months and registered perfect dissatisfaction with all of her First National productions. Then, she went to United Artists and after one picture she obtained her release to return to the company whose activities she found so annoying.

There are so few men in the world who wear a monocle gracefully and easily that we can count them on the left hand. Ivan Lebedeff is one who is a close second to Andrea De Segurola—filmland's most efficient monocle wearer. Mr. Lebedeff was in the diplomatic service as a guard officer in Russia before the Czar's throne was taken away from him. He has been in Hollywood trying to forget Russia for the last six months. I am under the impression that he was originally a David Wark Griffith discovery. Then, he was signed by the De Mille company without much chance to do more than minor parts. His new year, however, promises to start out in a far more auspicious manner for he will play the male lead in "Walking Back," the role originally assigned to H. B. Warner. I believe the name of the character is "Beaut," who is a bandit—but, of course, a nice bandit.

Los Angeles can expect to see "The Circus" at the new United Artists Theater in February. Joseph Schenck, who is as pleased as a youngster with a pink stick of candy over the way his new theaters have gone over in Los Angeles and Chicago, told me that Charlie Chaplin's latest would have its premier in Los Angeles in February. Before it opens "The Dove," starring Norma Talmadge and featuring Gilbert Roland, will make its bow. "The Dove" opens immediately at the close of "My Best Girl" in about four weeks hence. Speaking of "The Dove," David Belasco sent Miss Talmadge a telegram expressing his appreciation of her work as Dolores. Those who have seen it say Norma gives one of her finest performances.

Prepare to laugh. Ralph Spence will write the titles for "Tillie's Punctured Romance." He knows how to get comedy where it never grew before. The new Tillie is the story of a circus in war time. Nothing like the original. The cast of Louise Fazenda, Chester Conklin and W. C. Fields was hand picked by the Christies, who consider this their greatest comedy of the year.

The birth rate is increasing on the John Barrymore set at United Artists. First Sam Taylor, the director, became a proud father and yesterday morning Capt. Carey Harrison's absence was explained by the news that his wife had just given birth to an eight-pound baby boy. Capt. Harrison, who plays in the picture, is the son-in-law of Mrs. Lulu Case Russell, assistant to Beulah Livingston. Naturally, Mrs. Russell was also conspicuous by her absence. The baby is being named Frank Crane Harrison and already he is going to be a preacher or a movie star. Either job is equally strenuous.

Five-and-Ten? -:- It's All Right Now -:- His Nose Knows

Molly O'Day must be suspicious about the source of the beads she has in her hand. The other half of the picture is Larry Kent. They are in "The Lovelorn," film version of the Beatrice Fairfax novel of the same title.

But Jacqueline Logan, of "The Leopard Lady," will not fondle that leopard baby when it grows to manhood. She got used to jungle beasts in "The King of Kings."

John Barrymore's nose still is superior to that of Louis Wolheim, who had an operation performed to make it more straight.

Foolish Louis! His face is part of his fortune. With it he can play the toughtest of all hard eggs. Barrymore and Wolheim play together in "Tempest."

Lubitsch to Direct New Jannings' Photoplay

Preparations are being rushed at the Paramount studio in Hollywood for the next Emil Jannings picture, "The Patriot," upon which work is due to start early this month.

It tells the story of the mad czar of Russia, Paul I, son of Catherine the Great, who was killed by one of his ministers as an act of patriotic devotion after four years of oppressive rule.

Ernst Lubitsch, German director, who piloted Jannings in his minor part in Pola Negri's "Passion" several years ago, will direct "The Patriot." The cast includes Lewis Stone, Florence Vidor, Evelyn Brent, Vera Voronina, Tullo Carminati and Harry Cording.

No "Doubles" for These Movie Players

Among Hollywood's screen favorites are a group of actors who employ no doubles no matter how dangerous are the scenes and yet who are so vital to productions that injury or display of temperament on their part may cost much money. Their lives are heavily insured and they receive excellent salaries. They are the animal actors of moviedom.

There are a number of famous dog stars such as Rin-Tin-Tin and Strongheart. Fred Thomson, western star, has one of the most popular of all horse actors in Silver King. Another horse used at the Paramount studies in "Flash," star performer with Gary Cooper in "Nevada" and "The Last Outlaw," and of "Under the Tonto Rim."

Polo ponies are rented frequently. For "Senorita" a pony which would execute a hair-raising fall, was used. The price was agreed at $100 a fall, but the pony fell three times on the way to the railroad station. The owner insisted on the payments even though the camera was not turning, but his claim was not allowed.

Lions are used almost daily. The famous Gay Lion Farm, near El Monte, supplies these animals. A lion recently got loose at one of the studios and Oscar Smith, colored actor, clombed a wall to escape. Ladders had to be brought to get him down again.

Several trained animals were used in "Two Flaming Youths," co-starring W. C. Fields and Chester Conklin. One was a boxing kangaroo named Jack Delaney. Another animal was Neptune, a diving horse which skidded over a cliff with Chester Conklin on his back. Genevieve, a toothless lion, also made her appearance.

FIRE THREATENS INDIANA TOWN

By Universal Service.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Jan. 2.—An overheated furnace in the basement of the City Hall started a blaze which destroyed the building, damaged several surrounding homes, threatened the whole business district with destruction and caused injuries to two firemen. The loss was estimated at more than $100,000.

Firemen were handicapped by the 10 below zero temperature and help was asked from Indianapolis, 40 miles away. Of two pumper trucks dispatched from Indianapolis, one was wrecked on the way.

Classics Furnish Ideas for New Comedy

The classics, so prolific in song and story, are having their innings in the films and the latest screen favorite to reach back into the ages for material is Charlie Murray.

It is announced by First National Pictures that the comedian will appear next in a burlesque, which was especially written for him. In this film, Murray will enact the role of a New York political boss who gets knocked out in a cabaret brawl. During his ensuing period of unconsciousness he is transported to ancient Greece, where much of the action of the film is laid.

Murray's last picture was with George Sidney and was entitled "Flying Romeos." This was an aviation comedy directed by Mervyn LeRoy.

SEVEN AUTOS PILE UP IN CRASH; THREE HURT

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—Seven automobiles were involved in an accident on the highway near here, resulting in injuries to three persons. Two of the machines met in a head-on collision and were buckled by the terrific impact. One of the cars was thrown at a third auto coming down the road just before four other machines crashed into the pile of wreckage, adding to it considerably.

'SHOW BOAT' SET FOR RUN

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—With the unanimous acclaim of critics behind it, "Show Boat," the latest Ziegfeld attraction, has settled down for a long run in the Ziegfeld Theater. Reviewers on New York newspapers gave unstintingly of their highest praise to the colorful and tuneful music play, while it is the generally accepted view of Broadway that it is the greatest of all Ziegfeld offerings.

The New York World announced: "When Edna Ferber first wrote 'Show Boat' it is reasonable to suppose that she didn't see her heroine as a Ziegfeld soprano. It was Jerome Kern, casting about with the frenzied stare of a composer in search of a librette, who marked the novel as his own, lured it from its somewhat bewildered owners and set out happily for the Mississippi with the manuscript in his grasp.

"The amazing result has been the preservation of most of the old-time pathos and sympathy that made the story what it was and the creation of the most colorful and melodious production that has filled a Ziegfeld stage for many seasons past."

The New York Tribune declared: "Mr. Ziegfeld presented his long expected version of 'Show Boat' at the theater bearing his name and the production turned out to be that theatrical marvel—a show that lives up to all of its advance notices. For, in the drama business, it is more than axiomatic that an offering preceded into town by ecstatic advance reports is pretty certain to turn out a disappointment. Yet 'Show Boat,' which reached town amid enthusiastic heralding, was revealed as a beautiful, colorful and tasteful production, so full of georgeously pictorial atmosphere and so assisted by an excellent Jerome Kern musical score that it seemed bound to be one of the outstanding triumphs of the season."

DRAGGING ICY RIVER FOR MISSING HUNTERS

SHOALS, Ind., Jan. 2.—Two hunters, Samuel Albright and Thurman Jones, are missing and are believed to have drowned in Lost River, several miles west of here.

Neilan Completes Photoplay of Circus Life

Marshall Neilan has sent all the elephants home. In other words, he has finished his directorial work on the circus drama, "Do It Again," in which Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes share featured honors.

The picture, which was adapted from "Help Yourself to Hay," a magazine story by Dixie Willson, is now in the cutting room. The entire film company traveled with the Al G. Barnes Circus in order to make it.

While all the performers, sideshow freaks, barkers and other circus attaches form most of the supporting cast, with regular circus patrons as "extras," several notable film players play important roles. Lawford Davidson, Alice White and Yola d'Avril head the screen players in the cast supporting Miss Astor and Hughes, who enact the roles of circus performers.

NEW YEAR'S WELCOME CAUSES INJURY TO 35

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 2.—Checking up the cost of its New Year's Eve and morning celebrations, New Orleans found the toll was 35 injured, three probably fatally. Fireworks explosions were responsible for 20 of the casualties. Most of the victims suffered minor injuries when torpedoes or giant firecrackers exploded in the crowds which thronged the downtown streets. Automobile accidents were responsible for 11 other serious casualties. One drunken pedestrian was knocked down and probably fatally hurt.

PATRICIA PITT'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Going South of Many Folk Postponed by Two Weddings

THE season usually slumps after the holidays and the social set leaves immediately for the South and a new round of social activities. Many society folk will postpone their migrations to the South until the middle of February this year, however, because of two weddings of much interest.

Frances Schoen, daugther of Mrs. William Henry Schoen, of Fifth avenue, has just named the date for her wedding, Saturday, February 4. Her mother announced her engagement in November, you will recall, to Lewis A. Park of Pittsburgh and Sewickley Heights. The wedding will be small and will take place in the home of Frances' mother.

Frances, who came out several seasons ago, is one of the prettiest girls in the social set, I think. Mr. Park is a popular and most eligible bachelor. At one time he took a great interest in the cotillions and of course he is always seen at the local horse shows.

The other important wedding of next month is, you know, that of Elizabeth Lewis and John Follansbee on February 2.

Today, New Year's Monday, offers great variety in social functions. An interesting event of this afternoon, for both the younger set and their parents and friends is the tea-dance in the Allegheny Country Club, which the Charles J. Hamburgs of Edgeworth, Sewickley Valley, are giving to present their daughter, Harriet, to society.

Silver grapes, foliage and poinsettias have a background of southern smilax and cibotium ferns in the ballroom. Similar decorations are seen throughout the clubhouse.

Mrs. Hamburg, who is receiving with her debutante daughter and her husband, is wearing a gown of lavender satin, cleverly draped, a small hat of velvet in a deeper lavender tone than her gown, and a shoulder bouquet of lavender orchids.

The debbie is wearing a distinctive frock of yellow moire, which conforms to the vogue for straight lines and an uneven hem line. She is wearing a toque of yellow velvet, trimmed with gold and is carrying Parnet roses and lilacs, tied with gold ribbon. Margaret Ramsburg, another daughter of the Ramsburgs, who is serving as an aide, is wearing a frock of bois de rose georgette and a small hat of gros grain the same shade. Mrs. A. T. Heyn of South Orange, N. J., Mrs. Ramsburg's house guest, is also an aide. Her gown is of black velvet with rhinestone trimming.

Mrs. Ramsburg's other aides are Mrs. James D. Rhodes, Mrs. James C. Chaplin, Mrs. Glenn T. Braden, Mrs. Edward D. Gilmore, Mrs. F. R. Dravo, Mrs. George C. Hutchinson, Mrs. S. G. Cooper, Mrs. Charles F. Patterson, Mrs. Nelson R. Van Kleeck, Mrs. John Joy Edson, Jr., and Mrs. C. C. Taliaferro, Jr.

The bud has as her aides her house guest, Jane McKelvey of Youngstown, O.; Margaret McCready, Nancy Hamilton, Marie Boggs McBride, Mary McMahon, Mary Childs, Mary Mellon McClung, Anne Marshall, Juliet Hillman, Anne King Scott, all debutantes of this season, Margaret Ramsburg, her sister, and Jane Edson, Caroline Gilchrist and Virginia Goldsburry, all Sewickley girls.

Another out-of-town guest at the event is Graham MacDonald of New York, a classmate of Charles Ramsburg, Jr., at Hotchkiss, who is also a guest at the Ramsburg home.

Harriet completed her finishing school training last year in Paris, where she was a student at Miss Clements School.

One of the merry parties of the last day of the old year was a dinner dance given by Dr. and Mrs. Ogen M. Edwards, Jr., in the Pittsburgh Golf Club for their daughter, Katherine, who is home from the Masters School at Dobbs Ferry. Covers were laid for 8, with pink roses and white lilacs used in decorating. Katherine wore a smart frock of transparent blue velvet, trimmed with rhinestones, and a corsage of yellow roses and orchids. Mrs. Edwards was gowned in red and gold brocade.

This afternoon Dr. and Mrs. Edwards are holding their usual New Year's reception in their home. The Edwards are one of the few families that continue the custom of their parents and grandparents—that of receiving their friends on the first day of the New Year. Tea will be serv l late in the afternoon. Decorating the dining room and the breakfast room of the home will be roses in the library and other rooms of the residence.

Greet New Year at Make-Believe Night Club

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—Mr. and Mrs. George Hearst gave a dinner party on New Year's Eve at the St. Francis Hotel. They engaged one of the large apartments of the hotel for the occasion and had it transformed into a night club. The rooms were decorated in black and silver as a cabaret might be. The guests were at small tables with a central space for dancing. To carry out the effect of a night club, everyone had to pass a doorkeeper and give the correct password. During the evening there was entertaining by Gene Austin, who sang, and music by the Midshipmen Orchestra.

The guests included Mrs. Hearst's parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Wilbur, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Hermann, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Monteagle, Mr. and Mrs. John Guthrie Heywood, Mr. and Mrs. James Murray, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Father Dying, Insists Wedding Dance Go On

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Death was a guest at the wedding of Paul Rex and Miss Mildred Allind. John Rex, father of the groom, was stricken with heart disease.

"I'm dying, but I don't want that to stop the wedding," the father said. "Promise you will have the wedding and dance."

A few hours later the son was married and the dance followed.

"That was father's dying wish and we could not do otherwise than grant it," Paul said.

POLICE TO BURY HENRY RAPP

Henry (Buttermilk) Rapp, 65, a well-known figure around the City-County Building, the City Detective Bureau and police stations, died Saturday in the Mayview City Hospital from pneumonia. He will be buried tomorrow from a Fifth avenue undertaking establishment, the funeral being arranged by city detectives and newspaper men who have cared for Rapp for many years.

Rapp was injured in an automobile accident several months ago and for a while was confined to the Mercy Hospital, but later moved to Mayview. He became seriously ill a few days ago. It is believed that there are no living relatives and the funeral expenses will be borne by his friends at "headquarters."

When a boy, Rapp came to this country from Germany to join his grandfather, John Rapp, founder of the Economite Society at what is now Ambridge. For the last 25 years he has lived downtown.

CHICAGO GANG 'GETS' ANOTHER

By Universal Service

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Frank "Dutch" Carpenter, West Side beer runner, saloon owner and labor official, was slain Sunday.

His body was found in a snowbank on a West Side street, presumably thrown out of a speeding car, as the end of a "fatal" and now traditional gangsters' ride.

Records of beer sales, the prices varying from $35 to $55 a barrel, were found in his pockets. It has been learned that under the alias of "William Burns" he sold the beer to various West Side consumers.

Carpenter had a police record. In 1924 he was arrested, while operating a saloon, on charges of having slain James "Smuts" McFarland. The case was nolle prossed, Carpenter claiming he had been compelled to shoot in self-defense.

The slaying of Carpenter is believed to be the outcome of the shooting to death of two beer runners whose bodies were riddled with bullets at the Lone Tree Tavern, near Niles, last week.

Fat Is Not a Sure Sign of Baby's Health

WHEN we grow big and in the prime of life we have reserves of strength and health. If an accident or an illness comes we have powers of resistance to overcome it. A surplus of energy has been laid up against that day.

DR COPELAND

A tiny baby is not so fortunate. Every bit of food has been utilized to furnish building material for the growing body. There has been little to spare to put away for reserve purposes. But tender as the infant is, it is surprising what strength it has and how it will hold out against an attack of really serious illness. However, we cannot have confidence in the face of sickness unless the baby has been properly and consistently fed.

Of course there are other things to think of than just the question of feeding. Sunlight, fresh air, proper clothing and personal cleanliness—these, too, are vital to the child's welfare.

But the kind of foods served and the regularity of the feedings are the most important of all the essential considerations of babyhood. If these are right, the chances are the baby will be ready for any attack which may be made upon it.

The most deceptive thing about a baby is its looks. It is frequently the case that a youngster takes first prize at a baby show, who isn't a bit good looking, as good looks are understood.

It isn't always the fat, round-faced, cherub-like infant that is strong and healthy. A baby may be a roly-poly kid and yet have very low powers of resistance.

Some of the so-called "infant foods" are hardly more than almost pure starch. They are fed by fond mothers, the babies get fat and round, "pot-bellied" and all. Their mammas think they are wonders and, of course, they are: but they aren't wonders of good health and vigor.

The proper food for a baby is milk. The best of all food is mother's milk. If this cannot be had, then the highest type of cow's milk must be substituted.

Cow's milk differs in structure and content from mother's milk. For that reason it has to be "modified," or prepared for the child. This mixture varies with the age of the baby.

Of course, you know all this, but the trouble is you don't always act on your knowledge. Many a baby in having a starchy "infant food" is getting ready for disaster in consequence.

Don't depend on what some friend or neighbor has told you about foods for your baby. Talk with your doctor and have him advise you as to the right mixture. Take no chances on the welfare of the baby and don't be deceived by mere fatness.

THE RETURN ENGAGEMENT—"The Crowning Glory"

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

DID you think it would last forever, the same sleek bob? Even bobs have varied and changed almost weekly, before our eyes.

Did you think hair could stay the same always on any GIRL'S head? Man's coiffeur seems to last his lifetime, as the rough tubes of his trousers do. But nothing that belongs to a woman's outer mask does. For women weary of themselves looking one way too long. "Let me look in my mirror and see another lady!" she sings to the Goddess of Change.

The back of the head seen everywhere for some time, like a greyhound's back for closeness, would have changed long ago if the girls had had to look at it. For take notice how often in two years they have completely metamorphosed the fashion of the front. And I know more than a dozen damsels who are weary unto death of the look of their heads in the back—with evening clothes.

For, listen, a smart young maiden made this casual remark, not knowing that she was revealing the way the winds of fashion were setting: "I'm letting MY hair grow. You see, I don't want to look like a gran'mother. All the alderly WOMEN I know have their's short, and I look exactly like them! Besides, I've never had long hair, my dear, and I'd love to try it." You see? We forget that these youngsters have never had anything BUT short hair and they are bound by all the laws of change to have a crack at something new!

So you better get all set for at least a fringe, and plan your method of getting tided over the awkward age of your growing hairs!

And again we may see the spectacle, so That Chic Paree tells us, of the Peke or the Terrier dashing away with our bunch of false curls that we wear to cover the growing pains of our "back hair." And again we may know that we have such a thing as "back hair," long forgotten. And instead of "two-faced," your girl may be two-headed, sleek up the back in the daytime—if she chooses to put her trust in a "transformation"—and luxuriantly curled about the neck of an evening.

Here are some ideas of how to meet the situation if it comes.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

A First Love Affair

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

COUNTLESS articles are being written nowadays—sermons are being preached—books are published every month of the year—discussing the evils of modern youth.

Although modern boys and girls think for themselves perhaps more vigorously than youth in former generations, due to improved methods of education and a higher plane of mental and physical health, hence demand, "Why?" more frankly and insistently, questioning all that is established and conventional there is no reason to believe that youth today is essentially different from youth yesterday or 50 years ago.

There have always been and still are young men and girls who live solely for the self-indulgence of the moment, like silly moths, ignoring the fact that suffering as the result of violating natural law is inevitable. Millions of the youth of today, however, think, build for the future, cultivate self-restraint and endeavor to express their best selves only.

Youth is and always has been in the history of mankind, romantic, idealistic, radical. If this were not true, the race would soon die out.

Here is a letter from a boy who is neither a sheik, nor a self-indulgent egotist. And his letter is representative, in its general tone, of thousands I receive from young men.

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"I am 19 years old. I go with a girl a few years my junior. I am a little different in some ways from other boys, in that I never learned to dance and also in that this is my first love affair.

"Since I don't know how to dance, the only place I can take her is to a movie or theater. She says she doesn't mind, but I think differently.

"I love this girl dearly. But I would give her up if I knew she could have a better time with someone else. It would break my heart to do it, but if she were happy I would be somewhat consoled.

"The reason I think she is not happy is because the last time I asked her to go out with me, she said, 'Well, I suppose.' When she said that, it hurt me down in my heart.

"Would you suggest my asking her whether she is happy—whether there is something else I can do to make her happy? Or would you let things go on as they are? Remember, I love this girl and would do anything for her. I am waiting patiently for an answer, hoping for the best.

"ONE OF YOUR READERS."

Let things go as they are, my friend. If the girl you love, did not like you, she would not accept your invitations. It is a very pleasant, suitable attention to a girl you admire and like, to invite her to the theater or a good movie, now and then.

She probably is not in love with you. Nor are you in love with her. You will both enjoy many friendships and may feel attracted first to one, then to another sweetheart, before serious love comes, when you are old enough and mature enough to know your own heart and mind and settle down to marriage.

Continue to try to please your friend. If she likes to dance, why do you not learn? She might agree to show you the new steps some evening when you are at her home. Then you could take her now and then to a dancing party or to a hotel for a tea dance. You might even benefit from a course of dancing lessons together.

It is right and natural that you should try, hard, to please girls who interest you. But, remember, the chances are they like you also. So do not try to the point of becoming worried, perplexed and unhappy. And do not permit yourself to be so sensitive that every casual remark of a girl, every sign or frown, makes you miserable. Girls have moods. And if they like you well enough to feel natural and easy with you, they will to some degree express these different moods of vivaciousness or quiet restfulness.

Try to please girls you like, but do not grovel in your effort to do so. Simply play the manly part of a good friend and enjoy their society. If one girl does not find you the type that appeals to her, other girls will.

It is pleasant to hear from a young man—even a very young man—who lacks confidence in himself, rather than going to the extreme of self-complacency and conceit.

There are thousands of modern young men who are gentle and thoughtful of others. If modern girls will make an effort to discover and appreciate their dependability and fineness of character and disposition they can look forward with every hope of success to love and marriage.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

FEW men can remember WHY they got married—and most of them don't even remember HOW!

A man never takes the first kiss with the intention of getting married—but then, a man never takes the first drink with the intention of getting drunk.

Love is rapidly becoming as quick and painless as surgery. A moment of headiness, a brief dream—and, the first thing you know it's all over, and you haven't felt a thing!

HELEN ROWLAND

At forty, a woman begins to "look back over her life!" but that is just the moment when a man wakes up and begins to wonder what thrilling or romantic vistas are ahead of him.

The quickest and surest paths to a man's heart, nowadays, appear to be over the footlights and across the office desk.

* * *

Among the new occupations now open to women are bank-breaking, highway robbery and husband-shooting. And still the Government refuses to take them on as dynamo tenders, because the dear, little things are too frail and timid.

* * *

Every seasoned wife knows that the psychological moment to touch her husband's heart or pocketbook is that magic interval just after his hunger has been appeased and before his dinner has had time to disagree with him.

"I love you," is still the hardest combination of words in the English language for a man to master. He will glide, dive, slide and dodge all around an avowal of love—and, if he's brave, he'll throw you a rope and dare you to DRAG him into it.

* * *

SOME men are wise enough to know that the complete attention of a woman of thirty or forty is more satisfying and thrilling than the complete INATTENTION of a flapper of twenty—but not MANY!

Time Lost From School

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

RHODA BOSWELL went home from school one day with a headache. Next morning there were red splotches on her face, a soreness in her throat and other symptoms that spelled a month's absence from school.

During the first week Rhoda was too ill to think about anything but her discomfort. Then she began to improve, and because she possessed a strong constitution she speedily recovered from the attack. But, in order to protect her classmates, she was required to stay at home until all danger of contagion was over.

At her mother's suggestion she called several schoolmates over the telephone and found out how much ground the class had covered in each subject. Then she opened her books at the last lesson she had recited and there she began studying. Of course it was not possible for her to learn thoroughly in a short time what the class had learned during a whole month; nevertheless, she read over the pages, she did a little of the writing exercises and worked a few examples of each day's lesson in arithmetic.

When she returned to school she was still somewhat behind the class, but by listening carefully and trying a little harder than usual she managed to make up for the lost time.

Betty Slade, another girl in school, was ill at the same time. And like the majority of children she came back to school at the end of the long absence without having opened a textbook. So the recitations sounded like Greek to her. There were words and phrases and references to this or that rule that she had never heard before.

For weeks thereafter she was groping along in the dark trying to understand what it was all about. She floundered through her recitations; she failed on her written tests and consequently became discouraged and disgusted with her school work.

What do your children do about their lessons when they are absent from school?

Quite often illness affects their eyes and it is not advisable for them to use them. Then somebody else in the home might read the lessons aloud.

Time drags for children when they are shut-in; and they welcome almost any occupation. If some older member of the family is generous enough to help with the lessons, the children are usually willing to listen and learn. Pupils understand that missing the class work for a number of days will handicap them when they return to school; and most of them will make an effort to study at home if they are encouraged to do so.

It is most important that your child should progress with his class. If he is absent one day or more see to it that he at least reads over the pages that his classmates learned during his absence.

228 Personal Incomes Exceed $1,000,000

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Fourteen persons in the United States filed income tax returns last year showing incomes of $5,000,000 or over during 1926, Commissioner of Internal Revenue D. H. Blair reported to Secretary Mellon.

Just who these 14 biggest money makers were, the bureau is keeping secret, and anybody's guess about the money kings' identities is as good as the next.

All-in-all there were 4,075,542 persons who filed returns up to August 31. They reported total net income of $21,565,176,526, or about two and a half billions more than Uncle Sam's national debt. They paid in net taxes a total of $727,479,426.

The 14 top-of-the-heap money makers were crowded on the upper rungs of the financial ladder by a small army just below. There were nine persons in the $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 income class, 14 in the $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 group, 23 having incomes between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000, 45 from a million and a half to two million and 115 in the million dollar income class.

In other words, there were 228 persons in the country whose income in 1926 ranged from a million dollars upwards.

That the 14 who topped the nation's list had considerably more than just $5,000,000 of net income each, was revealed in their total. It was $101,675,702. At just five million each, the total would have been but $70,000,000. These 14 paid a total net tax to Uncle Sam of $17,174,771, of which $11,327,765 was surtax, which begins to hit the bank roll after the $10,000 net income tax mark is reached.

Getting down toward the bottom rungs of the ladder, where the bulk of the masses are hanging on, the greatest number of returns in any one class of those who paid was 571,976 in the $1,000 to $2,000 bracket. These were the unmarried, go-it-alone group of clerks and toilers. They paid $1,767,408 in taxes on nearly a billion dollars earned.

In the $2,000 to $3,000 group there were 337,695 persons who paid taxes and 38,016 who didn't, because their exemptions exceeded their net income.

Those whose incomes ranged between $3,000 and $4,000 and who paid taxes totaled 242,733. In this group were 490,290 other persons who didn't pay a dime, because of marriage, dependents or one thing and another which gave them exemption.

In the $4,000 to $5,000 class there were 332,049 payees and 191,894 exempts. It was this army which paid the most tax of any group below the $10,000 income mark at which surtaxes begin to boost the totals. The total was $4,181,090.

The largest total tax paid by any class was $77,712,601, turned in by 4,706 persons whose incomes ranged between $100,000 and $150,000. The smallest was for 10,474 persons in the under $1,000 income class, who did not qualify under the exemption clauses and paid $46,145 in taxes.

Those in the income classes from $5,000 upwards, saved quite a bit by having a sizable amount in tax exempt securities, such as Liberty bonds and Treasury notes. These securities totaled $5,482,850,435 and earned $254,024,436 in interest from which Uncle Sam failed to extract any revenue.

The 14 biggest income taxpayers carried heavy loads of these tax-exempt securities, $174,551,564 in total, of which over a hundred million dollars was in tax free 3¼ per cent Liberty bonds. They collected $6,474,351 in interest, untouched by taxes.

The total of 4,075,542 returns filed by August 31 compares with 4,171,651 for the previous year. The tax yield for the year, $727,479,426, was slightly lower than for the previous year, when it was $734,555,142.

Corporation returns on 1926 income totaled 412,762, compared to 414,461 for the previous year. Of these corporations, 248,892 made $9,212,263,650 in net income and paid $1,181,805,566 in taxes. There were 163,871 corporations who reported they were "in the red" and their losses totaled $2,052,783,746. Losses in the previous year were $1,789,107,755.

New York state ranked far above all others in the number of corporations, 78,924, with Illinois second, 27,164, and Pennsylvania third, 22,562.

BRITISH PLANES CARRIED IN SUBMARINES

By ROBERT J. PREW.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Britain's most jealously guarded naval secret—the existence of aircraft carrying submarines—has been inadvertently revealed by a routine announcement in the London Gazette. A memorandum issued by the Admiralty announced that extra pay would be awarded to officers in charge of aircraft carried by submarines.

One expert says that the first submarine planes were folded and inserted in a big metal tube lashed on the submarine's deck in front of the conning tower. Today the machines are being built so that the hulls as well as the wings can be made to fold. They are dismantled so that they occupy an amazingly small space and are then lowered through a trap door on the deck to a compartment of the submarine. The plane can be assembled and launched on its floats in a few minutes.

GERMANS CLOSE OLD PRISONS

By Universal Service.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—Appalled at the increasing number of successful jail breaks the Prussian Ministry of Justice has ordered 15 large penitentiaries and 139 smaller prisons closed on the grounds that because of their antiquity they are a menace to the state.

Several of the old buildings were pronounced relics of the middle ages and no longer suitable for modern conditions.

It is further planned to close the old Benedictine Abbey in Werden-on-the-Ruhr, which has served as a penitentiary for the past hundred years. This building was used by the French during the Ruhr disturbances as a prison for German citizens who defied them.

By amalgamation and the building of new prisons it is hoped that every prisoner in Prussia may be taken care of in up-to-date institutions.

4 CAFES RAIDED IN NEW YORK

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Four restaurants and cabarets were raided and 26 persons arrested by prohibition officers Saturday night in a concentrated effort by the Volstead law enforces to ordain for New Yorkers a dry New Year's.

The officers of the law made the rounds in an orderly fashion. They did not smash or break up the pleasure resorts as they had threatened earlier in the week.

Dinty Moore's, one of Manhattan's most famous eating places, was one of the restaurants which won a padlock from the police. No patrons were arrested. In each case, it was admitted later by the Volstead men, very little liquor was found on the premises visited.

RUTH WINNING SYMPATHY

By Universal Service

OSSINING, N. Y., Jan. 2.—With only 11 more days to live, Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray heard the prison band of Sing Sing usher in the New Year.

Mrs. Snyder's only comment was: "I hope this year will bring me better luck than last year."

Executives of the State Department admitted that there is a change in public sentiment in favor of the condemned woman who, with Gray as an accomplice, murdered her husband for his insurance money last year. Gov. Smith is expected to listen to pleas for mercy by Mrs. Snyder's counsel on January 5.

THINKS DAWN PLANE SAFE

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—"Aviation is about due for a miracle; I still firmly believe that we shall yet hear from the Dawn."

Mrs. Brice Goldsborough, wife of the navigator of the ill-fated Grayson plane, made this New Year's prediction. She refuses to give up hope. Mrs. Frances Grayson and her three companions disappeared 10 days ago on the first leg of their proposed trans-Atlantic flight.

ROBBERS SMASH DOORS OF 32 BUSINESS PLACES

GALESBURG, Ill., Jan. 2.—A band of five robbers early Sunday smashed in the doors of 32 business houses, doing plate glass damage of $500 and obtaining loot of a little more than $100 in cash and an equal amount in merchandise.

BEDOUINS CLASH WITH FRENCH

By Universal Service.

JERUSALEM, Jan. 2.—The new year received its baptism of blood in the Near East when five French soldiers were killed and a large number were wounded in a battle with a force of Bedouins near the Trans-Jordan-Syrian frontier.

The French troops had occupied several villages in that region, erecting in them quarantine posts against the scourge of cholera, which is sweeping the Irag. The Bedouins resented the occupation, believing the French intended to hold the occupied points permanently, although the villages are in undemarked territory. The Bedouins assert this is British territory of the Transjordian, and that French soldiers have no authority there.

PEPPER TOUTED AS MELLON'S 'DARK HORSE'

MONEY LOVE by BEATRICE BURTON

(Copyright, Central Press Association.)

Like the Lilies of the Field, She Toiled Not; Neither Did She Spin

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Lily Lexington is the spoiled and only daughter of the Cyrus Lexingtons, who have always lived far beyond their means. She realizes her highest ambition when she becomes engaged to Staley Drummond, a rich bachelor older than herself. Downtown to meet her chum, Sue Cain, she is attracted by Pat France, a taxi driver. She asks him to drive her home. On the way she learns that he is cab-driving to raise money to finance a new kind of piston ring he has invented. Pat tells her that he is selling the cab to raise money for the piston ring, and she miserably wonders how she'll see him after that. Staley tells her the age-difference between them doesn't matter and tenderly kisses her. Lily realizes that she hates his love-making. Mrs. Lexington announces the engagement just as Lily's made up her mind to tell Staley that she doesn't want to marry him, and she feels like a mouse in a trap—helpless. The Lexingtons decide to get a chauffeur, who turns out to be Pat. Lily confesses to him she loves him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"AREN'T you ashamed to notice that he's good looking, when you're all but married to another man, Lily Lexington?" Her voice quivered with anger. "You've a common streak in you, my girl, that's what!"

And she shook her. But Lily only went on laughing.

"Don't take it so hard, Mother," she said, cheerfully. "I may as well tell you that I've practically proposed marriage to Pat, and he wouldn't have me on a bet!"

"Don't talk like a little fool, even if you are one," her mother told her. "I'll get rid of that fellow just as soon as I can without starting any gossip."

"He's going on Saturday in any case," said Lily. "It's killing me to think of it—but he is." She said it in a banter, light way, as if she were joking.

WHEN her mother left her alone Lily sat down before her dressing table and did some hard thinking.

She never had done very much really hard thinking in her life. It had always made her tired and nervous to think things out. Even when she was a little girl at school she had cried over problems in arithmetic—and so Mrs. Lexington had asked the head of the expensive private school not to give her too many hard problems to work out—and the head of the expensive private school had agreed not to. She knew which side her bread was buttered on!

Later Lily had stopped taking French lessons because they were too hard. And she had dropped piano lessons for the same reason.

For 22 years life had been made soft and smooth and easy for her.

She was like the Biblical lilies of the field . . . She toiled not, neither did she spin. But Sheba, in all her glory, was not arrayed—and served and sheltered and coddled—like Lily Lexington. She had been brought up in rose-colored cotton wool.

Now, suddenly, without any warning, she was faced with a real problem—a problem that nobody but herself could solve for her.

"I can make Pat marry me—I can cry and coax until he does it," she said to herself, her face sunk in her hands, her eyes on her lovely reflections in the toilet mirror before her. "But if I do, it means the Roy Jettersons, the grocery store, the washtub probably, and vanilla for perfume the rest of my life." She laughed for a second, remembering Pat's face when he saw the price mark on the bottom of the black glass perfume bottle.

Then her face grew grave once more. "And if I marry Staley—as I probably shall—I'll have everything I want in the world except Pat."

She remembered how she had said to Pat that morning: 'I'm going to marry you or know the reason why."

But now, when she was all alone with her thoughts, she began to wonder if she would have the courage to do it—to give up the life she was used to for life in the neighborhood of the France family's grocery store and Roy Jetterson's garage. All her black doubts and misgivings came back to settle over her like storm clouds.

After all, it was very pleasant to live in a world of big well-furnished rooms, high-powered automobiles, nicely-served meals, breakfasts on a tray, card parties and luncheons and dances.

To have nothing to do but enjoy herself had seemed the simplest and most natural thing in the world to Lily, always. It was impossible to think of life with poverty and hard work in it—

A knock sounded on the panels of the door, and Mrs. Lexington put her head into the room for an instant like a cuckoo suddenly popping out of a cuckoo clock. "Staley's downstairs to see you," she said, and popped out again.

On the foot of the bed lay the little pink sports dress that Lily had worn all day. It was crumpled and there were grass stains on the short, full skirt.

But she put it on, ran a comb through her shimmering red-gold hair, and flew down the stairs to him.

She had some vague notion of telling him, then and there, that she did not love him and couldn't marry him . . . But it seemed so breathtaking a thing to do. Burning all her bridges behind her.

"And then perhaps I'll be sorry after I do it," she told herself, pausing at the mirror on the stair landing to see if her nose was shiny. "Perhaps I'll get over this infatuation for Pat—" And so, still uncertain and puzzled and unhappy, she opened the door of the living room and held out her hand to Staley.

He smiled at her as he took it. "We've reached the hand-shaking stage of our friendship, eh?" he asked, good humoredly. "Well, that's encouraging!"

And then he kissed her in the quick, possessive way of a man who holds in his arms the woman who is to be his wife.

"I hate him to touch me," she thought, but she let him do it. . . . There was no use in burning any bridges behind her until she was sure of herself and Pat—sure of what they were going to do.

She sat down on the low, deep sofa that stood beside the empty grate, and Staley sat down beside her. He took his billfold from his pocket and drew an envelope from it.

"What's that?" asked Lily.

"Something I want to ask you about," the man answered, and showed her one of the torn halves of Pat's identification card—the half that had his photograph upon it.

"Where in the world did that come from?" Lily asked, her startled eyes upon it. But she knew instantly where it had come from. From Carrie, the housemaid! She must have gone straight to Staley from the house that afternoon!

"From Carrie," Staley said briefly. He had known Carrie and liked her always. She never forgot that he took three lumps of sugar in his coffee when he came to have dinner with the Lexingtons, and she always greeted him at the door with her cheery smile. "She said she found it in your room."

Lily did not try to answer him. Like most people who do not stick to the plain and simple truth, she had found out that there are times when dead silence does better than any falsehood.

This was one of those times, she told herself swiftly, with her lips pressed into a straight line that hid their beautiful Cupid's bow, and her eyes going rapidly from the card to Staley's face and back to the card again.

"This is the card that the taxi driver came here for that night a couple of months ago, I suppose,"

SEE PEPPER AS 'DARK HORSE'

By FRASER EDWARDS,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Now comes dame rumor with the information that George Wharton Pepper, erstwhile senator from Pennsylvania, is the "dark horse" being groomed by Secretary Mellon for the Republican presidential nomination.

There is no confirmation of this gossip on Capitol Hill, of course. Secretary Mellon even refuses to discuss it. The friends of Pepper are likewise silent. But the rumor persists.

It is based largely upon the fact that Mellon is reluctant to permit the use of his name as a presidential aspirant. It is assumed that Mellon must have a candidate and Pepper has been picked as the most likely man.

In this connection, it is recalled that Mellon supported Pepper in the $3,000,000 Pennsylvania senatorial primary, which Pepper lost to Senator-elect William S. Vare, although the Pepper forces spent over a million dollars in an effort to renominate the Senator.

The practical politicians are convinced that none of the candidates now in the field will garner the nomination and that it will ultimately go to a "dark horse." And that "dark horse" will profit by the great reservoir of votes from Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and New England swinging to him at the psycological moment.

Those who recall that it was Mellon's influence that made Dawes the Republican vice presidential nominee in 1924, after President Coolidge had indicated a preference for Secretary Hoover as a running mate, believe that Mellon may throw his weight to Dawes next June. But there is no evidence that Mellon warms to the presidential aspirations of Dawes.

Because of Pepper's marked ability and wide understanding of governmental affairs, he made a deep impression on the country during his comparatively brief service in the Senate. At the same time, Pepper's wavering on the World Court is regarded as one of the contributing factors to his defeat.

Pepper first came into national political prominence when he aided in the organization of the League for the Preservation of American Independence, designed to defeat the League of Nations. Subsequently, he favored the ratification of the League with the Lodge reservations.

It was Pepper who first devised a plan to defeat the World Court, but later he changed his views on that subject and urged the Senate to approve the protocol of the League Court.

In the event that Mellon is seriously grooming Pepper as a dark horse, there is widespread speculation here as to what Vare will do under such circumstances. For Vare has a vice-like grip on the eastern end of Pennsylvania, and it is unlikely that even Mellon could swing those delegates to Pepper.

New Year's Party Host Pulls Gun on Guests

By Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—As the aftermath to a New Year's eve party, climaxed by a gun fight, one man is dead, another is near death and a third is suffering from injuries.

The dead man, Gordon Walker, according to the police, was a guest at a party in an apartment occupied by Harry H. Reynolds, who is under arrest. Reynolds, authorities said, during the height of festivities, whipped out a gun and shouted, "You double-crossed me."

His frightened guests fled, but Walker and another guest, Giles Spica, were donning their coats when Reynolds is alleged to have opened fire, wounding both of them. A fight between the wounded men and their host ensued, police said, during which Reynolds was badly beaten.

Police entered the apartment to find all three men on the floor, unconscious. Walker died a few minutes after reaching an emergency hospital.

BANDITS DRESS AS COLLEGIANS

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Three armed youths, clad collegiate style, invaded the apartment here of Mrs. Mildred Batchelor, 26, robbed her and two women guests, and escaped with furs, linen and cash aggregating $7,000 in value.

Mrs. Batchelor, wife of a wealthy business man, and Mrs. Elizabeth Gibbons and Miss Sydney Duncan, young portrait artist, were awaiting the arrival of belated New Year's guests when the three bandits walked in.

JUGO-SLAVIA BARS MANY ITALIAN PAPERS

ROME, Jan. 2.—Embargo placed upon certain Italian newspapers by the Jugo-Slavian government, has provoked violent comment in the Italian press. One of the newspapers banned, the Popolo D'Italia, belongs to Arnoldo Mussolini, the Duce's brother. Another outlawed journal calls the action of the Serb authorities the "reincarnation of Hapsburg policy." All of the banned newspapers have vigorously criticized the anti-Italian policy of Jugo-Slavia.

FIRE IN FACTORY ROUTS GUESTS OF HOTELS

By Universal Service.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 2.—Three firemen lost their lives and two others were probably fatally injured as a result of a fire which destroyed the Montgomery Carriage plant.

The dead: C. D. Edwards, Grover A. Hogan, W. M. Jones.

The injured: Fire Chief R. E. Nixon, fractured skull, broken leg and internal injuries; H. S. Corum, fireman, broken arm and internal injuries.

The firemen were caught beneath a falling wall while the fire was at its height. The loss was estimated at $50,000. The origin has not been ascertained.

Guests of the Gay-Teague and Exchange hotels, opposite the carriage works, were roused from their slumbers and prepared to make hasty exits should it be necessary. Both hostelries are fireproof and the only damage to them was by water and a severe scorching in which many windows were broken by the heat.

Many New Year's revelers joined the firemen in fighting the flames.

IN a night club: A lean drummer shakes narrow shoulders as he taps his drum; the maestro announces: "This, ladies and gentlemen, is a $12 numbah." A beefy escort looks at his girl across the table with a look in his eye that ought to get him 90 days in jail. A girl remarks to her new-found friend: "Listen, dearie, don't ask me again how long

I've been leading this kind of a life. What's the difference? Give me another jolt of that switch oil." A toe dancer comes out to twinkle her toes. Why are toe dancers nearly always homely?

PITTSBURGH'S traffic policemen are busy straightening out their books after the holiday rush. At three corners of Bigelow boulevard the "intake" around Christmas time amounts to more than $5,000 shared by six or seven policemen. One lucky policeman confides that owing to the Christmas spirit of motorists his salary as a copper is nearly all gravy. These lucky cops, it is noted, make courtesy and cheeriness an all-year proposition. A wave in the morning and a salute in the evening, mingled with a pleasant tone even when a motorist gets into a jam pay big dividends to this well-known coterie of traffic policemen. "Sully," "Nick," "Red," and "Harry," are well-known to the drivers who daily drive into the city from East Liberty.

IT was inevitable that some sort of scandal should arise from the annual visit of Santa Claus. A North Side child reports that she saw Santy, arrayed in red and white, spread out the gifts. The wondering eyes of the child observed his movements so minutely that she noticed after Santa had trimmed the tree he went to a nearby cupboard and took quite a long swig out of a bottle. It is the first time in Pittsburgh at least that Santa Claus has been brought into the burning prohibition question.

A TAXI DRIVER was asked what class of women riders tip the best. Eloquently he replied: "Bums and the bummier they are the better they tip." He was referring to the Sadie Thompsons of the city.

Something suggestive of Horatio Alger is the authentic story of a former bank policeman who helped organize a small bank and was elected president of the new institution.

THERE are more Italian restaurants in Pittsburgh than any other kind that digress from orthodox American cooking. A new one is opening at Sixth and Wylie avenues. Americans take to Italian cooking. Some Pittsburghers are so accustomed to Italian restaurants that they can now eat spaghetti without looking entirely foolish.

PITTSBURGH'S book market is among the best in the country. The increased interest in books is evidenced by the fine space afforded the books departments by some of the bigger stores downtown. One store is so obliging that if it is out of the book sought it will send a shopper around to all other book stores, pay the retail price, and deliver the requested book to the purchaser. There are some real intellectuals among the sales girls—graduates of college whose attraction for books was the impelling motive in their taking the positions they hold. Quite a few have an ambition to write—a natural ambition among omniverous readers. For that matter, there is hardly a person in the world who does not imagine that close to his or her heart there is a novel or a play awaiting the time to be unfolded.

HARRY LITTLE, a Pittsburgh councilman, has one of the strangest hobbies. He likes to act as judge at amateur boxing tournaments. He is also distinguished by the fact he is the only Pittsburgh councilman in the long history of the city to have been literally blown out of bed. He lives near the scene of the recent fatal gas blast on the North Side.

MONEY LOVE by BEATRICE BURTON

Like the Lilies of the Field, She Toiled Not; Neither Did She Spin

he said, flicking it with his fingers. "The card that you said you didn't have—that you didn't know anything about."

Lily knew that this was the time to tell him the truth. The time to tell him that she loved not him, but Pat France.

She tried to, and couldn't do it.

"I—can't, and I won't talk this over with you, Staley," she said, after a long pause. "If you're going to marry me, you've go to trust me. You can't go around listening to tales from people who've worked here in this house—"

Staley's pleasant, good-looking face darkened. "I haven't listened to any tales of anybody's, Lily," he said. "Carrie brought this envelope to me in my office an hour ago, and told me it was something she had found in your room. She was gone before I ever opened the thing."

He tore up both card and envelope and tossed the pieces of paper into the empty smoke-blackened fireplace.

"But even if she hadn't shown me the fellow's picture I was coming here to talk to you about him," he went on, quietly. "It's perfectly clear to me that you know him a great deal better than anyone knows you do. . . . Your whole manner toward me has changed since the night he came to this house for that card—" His eyes went to the ashes of the fireplace, where the bits of torn card lay.

Lily gave him a long look from under the heavy black lashes that curled up from silver-white lids. "Well, what do you want to do about it?" she asked, pertly. "Break our engagement?"

He shook his head then, decidedly, just as she had known he would. She knew that was the last thing that he wanted!

"Good lord, we're going to be married in three weeks, and everybody knows it," he said. "We can't change our minds now. It's too late. . . . Besides, I want to marry you just as much as I ever did. More."

Lily smiled at him—a slow smile that curled up the soft corners of her pretty lips, but left her eyes as cold as ice. "Well, then, let's forget this card business, what do you say?" she asked, sweet as honey.

Mrs. Lexington came into the room all brightness and shrill, cheerful talk.

"Staying for dinner, Staley?" she wanted to know, giving him a motherly pat on the shoulder of his well-cut coat. "We haven't any waitress tonight, but Agnes has some roast veal, stuffed, and a custard pie.

Staley shook his head and thanked her. "I'm going back to town to have dinner with some men who are here from out of town," he said. "I just ran out here to see Lily for a minute. . . . I'm going in half a minute."

And he went, promising to have dinner with them on the next night.

Lily watched his stocky figure going down the front walk—watched it vanish into the big closed limousine that would soon be hers. That is, if she married him it would be hers.

And, still filled with doubts and uncertainties, Lily stood at the window of the room until his car turned the corner of Montpelier road and Larchmont boulevard.

"If he were Pat, he'd be through with me for good," she thought. "Pat would never marry a girl who played around with another man while she was promised to him. He wouldn't care what people said. He'd never look at her again."

She could hear him whistling in the yard, and she went out of the house by the front door and ran around to the back of it to have a word with him—to hear his voice and see him for just a second.

She found him, sitting at the top of a ladder, in his shirt sleeves, washing the windows of the breakfast room.

"What are you doing? Washing windows?" she asked, as he wrung a chamois skin out of his pail.

He shook his head. "No, I'm one of those flagpole sitters," he called down to her cheerfully. "I'm trying to see how many hours I can sit up here without falling to sleep and dropping onto the ground.—"

"Pat, I hope you're going to get those windows washed before it's dark," Mrs. Lexington's voice interrupted from the back porch.

"Yes, Mrs. Lexington, I will." Pat was all politeness.

He leaned down from his perch and spoke quickly and quietly to Lily. "Go on into the house. No use cooking up trouble for yourself."

She turned to go. "Then promise me you'll meet me in front of the house in an hour," she said in an undertone.

"Sorry," he answered, softly. "I'm going down home for a while tonight."

"I'll go with him!" Lily made up her mind, running around to the front of the house through the dusk that was beginning to gather like fog. "I'll see what his family is like—and how I'd have to live if I married him."

CHAPTER XVIII.

LILY could not eat her dinner that night, she was so afraid that Pat would get away from the house without her.

All through the meal she had one ear cocked for the sound of the garage door opening and closing. Her hat and coat were lying on a chair in the hall, all ready for her to slip on at a second's notice.

She pecked at her food, rolled her bread into little crumbs, and drummed on the tablecloth with nervous fingers.

Ten minutes to seven found her getting up from the table, leaving her dessert untouched.

"Aren't you going to eat your pie? It's cocoanut custard," said Mrs. Lexington. "I had Agnes make it especially for you."

She and Agnes always were planning to have things that Lily liked to eat—creamed chicken, peas, cornbread, frozen fruit salad, cocoanut custard pie. The whole house revolved—and always had revolved—around Lily and her likes and dislikes.

"I'm not hungry, Mother," she said now, shaking her head and pushing her chair back into place.

Mr. Lexington winked at Mrs. Lexington. "These engaged girls don't have much appetite, Ellie," he said, wittily. "They're so full of plans for the future that they don't have much room for food, I guess. He was well content these days, knowing that his daughter was marrying the man of her choice and her heart when she married Staley Drummond. . . . He often told himself that his little girl was marrying well when she married a man who could give her all the things that he, himself, had been slaving to give her all his life—fine clothes, fine cars, fine friends and fine times.

"Remember how love-sick you were just before we were married, Ellie?" he asked his wife, with some more of his heavy humor.

Mrs. Lexington sniffed scornfully. She never had been love-sick in her life, and she said so.

"I?—I can remember how I worked right up until the night I was married on my wedding dress, making every stitch of it myself," she said with force and vigor. "I couldn't find a dressmaker in our little town who could make it with any style, so I did it myself. And I hemstitched all my handkerchiefs and underthings, too. There never was anything love-sick about me, Cy Lexington!"

Lily could easily believe her, as she sat there with her big commanding nose in the air and her chin lifted haughtily. There was nothing soft and yielding and beautiful about her. And she never had had any of the feminine charms of Lily, who looked as if she were made for love, with her petal-like skin, her mouth that was like a perfumed velvety flower.

Harry Underwood, Her Recreant Husband, Seems Drawing Closer to Lillian

THOUGH it was but two or three minutes before Lillian raised her face from my hands clapsing hers, yet it seemed hours to me, waiting tensely to hear the rest of the story she was telling me. Never in all the years of our friendship had she opened her heart to me, and I wished to miss no word of the revelation she was making. I did not yet know how I could help the perplexity of soul which appeared to be hers, but if I could not help her, at least it would not be because of my inattention.

"Men are queely alike," she said at last, lifting her face, sad and worn with the memories which were ravaging her. "For instance, you could not imagine two more widely divergent tyes than Robert Savarin, gentle, high-minded, with delicate perceptions and lofty ideals, and Harry Underwood, bluff, rollicking, masterful, brilliant—unscrupulous. Yet the same vein of jealous possession lay deep in both. Robert dearly loved Marion, as you know, and she loved him to the extent of pleading childishly that I marry him and give her 'a real father.'

"But I realized all too soon that Robert was not only archiacally jealous of my work and the professional contact with other men it brought me, but if I married him there sometime would come the clash between his interests and Marion's, and that he would resent the preferment of her, which I inevitably would make so. So I sent Robert away, and though it was a cruel wrench, the shattering of a beautiful dream, yet I have not been unhappy. How could I be, with Marion?"

Her lifted face was illuminated with the maternal love which is the allpervading emotion of her being. My spirit bowed reverently before it, yet I could not help a cynical query, which, of course, I was careful not to utter.

What will happen when Marion marries, and Lillian is left alone, an ageing woman?

Another and more disturbing question pushed its way into my thoughts, although its asking seemed almost blasphemous treachery to winsome, sweet-souled Marion Morton. Suppose the child should inherit some of the ruthless selfishness of her father, and that in years to come, the trait should triumph over Lillian's careful training in altruism!

She stirred restlessly, and I caught my breath in panic-stricken remembrance of the almost psychic powers which I had observed in her at different times.

"I must be honest with you, Madge. Even if Marion should—disappoint—me in years to come, I cannot regret the decision I made concerning Robert. The years of his—affliction—life itself has set him so far apart from the progress of the world and modern living conditions that it would be impossible for me to make him happy. For myself, I do not care. But I could not bear to see him unhappy because of my failure to meet his ideal of me."

As if it were the voice of a mocking little devil, I seemed to hear again Philip Veritzen's voice speaking scornfully of "that aged, archaic artist, Robert Savarin." Was it possible that subconsciously Lillian's ultra-modern self was lonely for the bizarre, joyous, tempestuous comradeship which had been hers with Harry Underwood?

There was one test to which the apparently irresponsible boulevardier always had measured up. He was a "man's man." He had been Dicky's best friend, and within 24 hours I had heard Philip Veritzen, a man utterly dissimilar to my husband, yet also possessed of the qualities which men deem admirable, praise Lillian's recreant husband in terms surprisingly enthusiastic for so reserved and critical a man.

With a voice that I vainly strove to keep even, I spoke hurriedly:

"... you know it seems almost uncanny that you should be telling me this just now. I have been waiting the opportunity to give you some news of Harry, which Mr. Veritzen wished me to give you."

THOUGH the chances in the main are against Pitt in the big football game at Pasadena this afternoon, one possibility that the dope may be upset is contained in the fact that Coach Jock Sutherland has some new plays to spring on the unsuspecting Californians.

JOCK SUTHERLAND

Whether they will be successful or not remains to be seen, of course, but at any rate the Panthers, at some stage of the gridiron proceedings are going to give their coast opponents a taste of the unexpected.

These plays have been used by the Panthers only in secret practice, and their nature is known only to the squad and the coaching staff, but that some new stuff had been invented and perfected was admitted confidentially by the Blue and Gold leaders before the party set out on the transcontinental trip last Monday night.

EVIDENTLY, therefore, Coach Sutherland has not been asleep. He saw that he and his team would be placed at a disadvantage by reason of the fact that Pop Warner, the Stanford coach, had an opportunity of scouting the Panthers here on Thanksgiving Day, whereas Sutherland himself has never seen even a photograph of Warner's team, so the canny Scot set about partly to offset the handicap by designing some new plays of which Pop could have no knowledge.

That's about the only chance that Pitt has to fool their foemen and the dopesters this afternoon.

It has long been conceded by football men that when Warner has a good team of his own he can nearly always beat any eleven that he has personally scouted. Sutherland's main chance, accordingly, is to surprise both the "old fox" and the Stanford team by putting over something that Pop did not see when he watched the Panthers in action on Thanksgiving Day and took numerous notes of their formations, etc., in order to map out a defense for them.

POP WARNER

APART from that possibility of some new plays catching the coast gridders unawares, Pitt's chance for victory does not look promising. The team is under too heavy a handicap—lack of practice, long trip, and strange climate—to be able to avert a loss of form amounting to 25 per cent or more.

No encouragement can be found in the outcome of the Penn-California game in Berkeley last Saturday.

The dope as to the weakening effects of the California climate upon Eastern football players appears to be borne out by the fact that Penn was leading, 13 to 7, at the end of the first half, only to wilt and make it possible for the California team to roll up 20 points in the last two quarters and win out 27 to 13.

WHAT the new year holds for the Pittsburgh baseball club will not be known until next fall, but at this early stage there isn't a team in the National League that enjoys an outlook quite so bright.

DONIE BUSH

No other manager in the Heydler organization is as well prepared to start the season as Donie Bush. The little skipper admits that though it is only the second day of the new year, with the opening of the pennant race more than months off, he could start his squad on the training trip at once, if it were necessary to do so.

WHEN the new year came in it found that a staggering number of changes had taken place among the champions and leading figures of the sport world, but one personage was continuing serenely on in a career that has no parallel.

CONNIE MACK

While countless leaders in various sports have fallen on all sides of him from year to year, Connie Mack goes on like a rival of Tennyson's well-known brook. Another twelve-month has drifted by without interrupting his reign as manager of the Philadelphia Americans, and now we find baseball's greatest time-defier beginning one more year at his old post.

There is no managerial record in baseball to compare with Mack's. This will be his twenty-ninth season as pilot of the Athletics, and his thirty-fourth year at the head of ball clubs in different circuits.

OLYMPIC HOPE HURT

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Al Miller, former Harvard sprinter who is training for the Olympic games, sprained a leg tendon while practising on the Harvard board track. It was learned today. The sprain will incapacitate him for the remainder of the indoor season and possibly for the Olympic trials, it was reported.

THEY CLASH TODAY

What Gibby Welch, all-America halfback is to the Pitt Panthers, Dick Hyland is to Pop Warner's Leland Stanford University eleven, which vies with the undefeated Panthers in the Tournament of Roses feature at Pasadena, Cal., this afternoon. They call him "Tricky Dick," because of his elusive tactics in the open field.

Backfield Aces In Rose Battle

Charleroi Boxers On Bill

THREE Charleroi boxers appear in the four eight-round bouts that make up the holiday boxing matinee at Motor Square Garden this afternoon.

Willie Davies, the state flyweight champion, tops the bill, against Alec Burlie of Toronto, Canada, and his stablemate, Young Saylor, meets Rudy Ceder of Tarentum in the semi-final, while Young Rudy, managed by James (Red) Mason, hooks up with Harry Harris of Niles, O., in the second bout.

Jimmy Belmont of Braddock and Harry Taylor of the North Side battle in the opener, which is billed for 2:30.

Cuddy DeMarco boxes Billy Petrolle at Fargo, N. D., today, Sandy Seifert meets Emmett Rocco in a 12-round bout at Youngstown and Phil Goldstein opposes Harry Scott at Holyoke, Mass. Young Piazzi has been forced by an attack of quinzy to call off a bout with Pep O'Brien at Williamsport.

Paulino Uzcudun boxes Pat Lester at Newark today. Eddie Anderson meets California Joe Lynch and Dave Adelman encounters Harry Crisp at Akron, while Maxie Rosenbloom boxes Frankie Schoell at Cincinnati. Henry Lenard boxes Paul Allen, Ralph Mendoza meets Joe Chaney and Billy Showers engages Jack McCarthy at Chicago.

Sid Terris and Jimmy McLarnin have been matched for Madison Square Garden, New York, February 3.

Benny Touchstone boxes Jack Humbeck, the Belgian heavyweight, in a 10-round bout in New York tonight. King Tut and Tommy Cello box the main bout of a show at Recreation Park, San Francisco. Armand Emanuel and Frankie Muskie, heavyweights, meet in the semi-final, and Soeddy Dado and Delos (Kid) Williams in the main preliminary.

Benny Bass, featherweight champion, boxes Pete Nebo in the 10-round main bout at the Arena in Philadelphia this afternoon.

SHOTS and PASSES by Julius Levin

TWO attractive games are scheduled in the Allegheny County League tonight, the McKees Rocks Business Men invading the South Side Market House to meet the Goose Goslins, while the Broadway Club goes to Braddock to engage the Braddock American Legion passers.

The Goose Goslins will be out to avenge an early-season defeat when they take the floor against Ralph Heinauer's passers. The South Siders were handed a surprise package when they invaded McKees Rocks recently and will be out to turn the tables tonight.

The Braddock-Broadway game likewise should develop into a nip-and-tuck affair, as both teams are playing at the top of their game at the present time. Braddock was forced to take three straight reverses before it managed to win its first league victory.

Admitted to be one of the best clubs enrolled in the County League, the Braddock passers are just getting their bearings and are certain to make it quite interesting for the Beechview aggregation.

When Broadway is able to muster its regular lineup, there are very few teams in this section that can compare with the Beechview favorites. Bill Schuster and Micky Gross have lined up a quintet this winter that should go far in the County League race.

THE Siano Club, bolstered by the addition of Palamone, former Kingsley House flash, will attempt to regain its winning stride tonight when it clashes with the B. L. Succops at Columbus Temple in a Pittsburgh and Ohio Valley League battle.

The Sianos have one of the most impressive looking squads in the P. & O. League race this winter, but for some reason or other have been unable to get off to a consistent winning streak.

In stacking up against the Succops tonight the Sianos face a team that defeated them earlier in the season. The Succops are known to be a club that invariably upsets the dope when they are picked to lose.

The addition of Palamone adds an experienced passer to the Siano roster and he should prove a valuable cog in the Columbus Temple machine. Tony Siano, backer of the team, appears to be sparing no expense in endeavoring to line up a winner.

Yans Wallace and Phil Gentille, likewise, give the Sianos two veteran performers who have enjoyed years of success in the professional sport.

The Sianos, while out of the running for the first-half championship, still have hopes of making a strong recovery in the last half of the race. Once this club gets its bearings it is going to prove a problem to stop it.

THE McKeesport Cyclers will present their first American League attraction next Wednesday night when they entertain the Fort Wayne quintet, including Pip Koehler in the lineup, on the McKeesport Y. M. C. A. floor.

Indications are that a capacity crowd will turn out for the game as it marks the first appearance of Koehler in Pittsburgh as a member of an American League quintet.

SPEAKING of SPORTS by HARRY KECK SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS EDITOR

WE read a lot these days of the new-found wealth of Gene Tunney, the heavyweight champion, who only last week was admitted to membership in Tex Rickard's Madison Square Garden Club for millionaires, and of the fortune accumulated by Jack Dempsey, the greatest drawing card in the history of boxing.

But out in California there's another famous fistic figure who also has a cool million and about whom little is heard these days. He is Jess Willard, the Pottawottamie Giant, who restored the heavyweight championship to the white race a dozen years ago by beating Jack Johnson and reigned until he lost to Dempsey in 1919.

WILLARD is a realtor in Hollywood, and estimates his holdings to be worth more than a million, and he is going right ahead with improvements that will net him considerably more. He is a keen business man, although he went broke in the circus business while he was champion and had to stage a "comeback" campaign to get a fresh financial start after losing the title. He weighs 280 pounds now, about 25 pounds more than when he was in fighting trim, smokes big black cigars and is at peace with the world.

JESS has five children, two of them boys, and he vows the latter never will be fighters. All of his children were born during his ring career. They range in age from 12 to 17 years. Jess likes children. He plans some day to build a mammoth apartment building to be rented out to persons in moderate circumstances, and he says there will be no signs on it reading: "No dogs or children allowed."

He remembers bitterly the days when he was struggling to make his mark as a boxer and rearing his brood and had difficulty finding living quarters because of the youngsters. And as for the "No children or dogs" decree, he says it makes him boil every time he thinks of the way some property owners classify children with dogs, and many times give the animals preference. He'd like to swing knockouts on the chins of those misguided mortals who allow dogs but no children on their premises.

Bluffmen Face Old Rival

By JESS CARVER.

NEW CONCORD, O., home of Muskingum College and its Magenta and black-clad basketball team, will center all of its New Year's interest on the basketball court at Duquesne University tonight when the Muskies and Dukes resume cage relations.

Last season Muskingum broke even in a two-game series with the locals, losing by a point or two here and then topping the debonair ones out in New Concord by quite a sizeable margin. Muskingum showed a fine team here last winter, one of the best to appear in Pittsburgh all year, with a flock of husky players and some neat formations and offensive manners.

Tonight seven lettermen, in addition to some fine sophomore material, will be at Coach Lange's beck and call. The star of the team, Taylor, giant center, is back again, captain this year, better than ever.

This game will start quite a busy week for the tri-state district teams. In addition to the game here, St. Canisus will begin a short invasion of the territory by meeting D. & E. at Elkins. The Saints play Salem tomorrow and Waynesburg Wednesday.

The big games of the week will be the Carnegie-West Virginia and Pitt-Syracuse encounters. The Tartan-Mountaineer battle is the opening Big Four game of the season and will be the second of the year for Tech. Tech pries off the lid with D. & E. Friday night.

Doc Carlson was thoroughly disgusted with the showing made by Pitt Saturday night and plans a week of intensive drill for the Pitt Magicians in preparation for the Syracuse' game Friday.

Geneva will take stock today after the defeat suffered at the hands of the Webster Hall quintet Saturday night. The Covenanters started off their campaign by downing the Y. M. H. A. team here Thursday. But fell before the Websterians Saturday night. Pitt, Geneva, Grove City and the Dukes were the only teams in action last week from this neck of the woods.

The probable Duke-Muskingum lineup:

(Two points for victory; one for tie.)

With a great 4-0 victory over the Montreal Maroons, scored in the last period, at Duquesne Garden, Saturday night, under their belts, the Pittsburgh hockey players entrained today for Boston, where they are resolved to keep the ball rolling in tomorrow night's battle with the Bruins. They now are tied for fourth place with the Chicago Blackhawks.

The locals have a stiff week ahead of them. From Boston they go to New York, where they meet the Americans Thursday night, and on Saturday night, they play the Detroit team here.

New York, Jan. 2.—The New York Americans bowed to the Boston Bruins, 3-2, in a hot hockey battle in the Garden last night. Lionel Hitchman was the star for the visitors, scoring two of their goals and assisting in the manufacturing of the third.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—The Montreal Canadiens continued to hold a comfortable lead on the rest of the pack in the National Hockey League chase today, their point score of 26 permitting an advantage of six over their closest rivals, the Rangers and Boston Bruins, who are deadlocked for the lead in the American division.

while Stanford lost two contests, both to small college teams, was too fresh in the memory of the gamblers.

Gridiron experts, the coaches of the southland, were almost overwhelmingly for Stanford. Howard Jones, the University of Southern California mentor, ranked the two teams even, while his assistant, Aubre Devine, was one of the few who thought the Panthers would win. Slip Madigan, whose St. Mary's team was one of the two to beat the Cards, chose the Warner team. Coach Bearg of Nebraska was another who did not pick a favorite. Alonzo Stagg, veteran Chicago coach, also declined to name his favorite.

A comparison of the teams on their players' merits showed little advantage for either. In the kicking department the Cards were considered the better generally with Wilson, Hyland and Hoffman booting the leather. Stanford followers also saw no chance of the Pennsylvania team coming out ahead in the passing battle. Here, again, Hoffman, a star weightman on his school's track and field teams, was expected to star. Practically all his backfield teammates also are proficient at tossing passes.

Hagan and Welch do the Pitt aerial stuff. The veteran Stanford line was considered as the equal of its opponents both on offensive and defensive. While the invaders have with them the "Great Gibby," supporters of the Palo Alto outfit believe that the long train ride, coupled with "watch Welch" instructions, would do much to cripple the Panthers' attack. More than one coach, who picked the Stanford team to win, give the long ride as his sole reason.

About 70,000 persons were expected to watch the game.

FORBES

Ford to Have Price Rival; Trade Warfare Is Brewing.

A Chart for Coming Year If You Make Resolutions

By B. C. FORBES

ONE automobile price which will set the whole country talking is about to be made. The man going to make it is John N. Willys, of Willys-Overland and Whippet.

I understand that Mr. Willys will name a price on one of his products which will match the Ford price on the same type of closed car. Indeed, the report is that the Willys price on this particular type of his Whippet will be even a trifle lower than Ford's.

This unquestionably means that we are about to witness throughout the whole automobile field a veritable war for business.

CHEVROLET, not to be outdone by Ford or any other maker, has just announced a notably improved product, also at lower prices for various types. The four-wheel brake is among the improvements embodied in the new Chevrolet.

General Motors has effected distinct improvements in other makes of its low-priced cars, notably in the Oakland-Pontiac division. And here, also, the importance of naming the most attractive prices possible has been recognized.

Dodge Bros. announce that "The Victory Six" will be introduced tomorrow all over the country. This company has made it known that it is determined to fight to maintain leadership in its class.

Studebaker invited people yesterday to "see for the first time" its new eight-cylinder car, "The President," of 100-horsepower and priced under $2,000. This company is also to the fore with other improved makes.

Chrysler, whose rapidly-attained success has been a sensational chapter in the automobile history of the last few years, is not slackening its efforts one iota to rank next to General Motors and Ford in point of production.

That the New York automobile show, which opens on Saturday, will bring highly interesting developments in the ranks of higher-priced cars is definitely intimated.

Almost the only manufacturer who does not figure in current developments or current reports concerning impending developments is W. C. Durant, whose plans at one time were more eagerly awaited than those of any other maker.

THE attitude taken by General Motors, by Ford and other leaders towards one another in their public statements is admirable. Each giant politely deprecates all talk of any "war" brewing in the industry.

The fact is, however, that the stage is all set for competitive warfare—not any personal warfare, not any warfare of bitterness or hate, but strictly business warfare.

BY NAMING the same low price for his new car which he charged for his old car, notwithstanding that it is several hundred pounds heavier and improved in almost every respect, Henry Ford threw out a trade challenge other makers of low-priced cars could not afford to ignore. The universal verdict in the trade is that Ford cannot possibly make any profit on his new car until he is able to reach a production of several thousand cars a day. Once he attains anything like the peak production he enjoyed with his original car, Ford, say other makers, probably will be able to make money.

Ford having thus offered the public more value than ever before for their automobile dollar, so to speak, other progressive manufacturers of low-priced cars manifestly have reached the conclusion that it is up to them also to offer the public greater value for their dollar than ever before.

That, in a nutshell, is the explanation of what you see happening this week.

MY GUESS is that the steps taken by Chevrolet and other General Motors companies, combined with the spectacular price-cutting plans of John W. Willys with his Whippet, will bring on price reductions elsewhere in the industry.

THE automobile industry is becoming so vital, so momentous a factor in our national well-being that it is earnestly to be hoped that there will not break out unreasonable price-cutting. It is entirely desirable that you and I should enjoy the benefits of the economies motor manufacturers are able to effect through mass production, new fruits of science, more economical distribution, etc.

But it would be deplorable were competition to be carried to the point where it would make impossible the earning of reasonable returns for the millions of holders of automobile securities. Let us hope that our automobile giants will exercise sufficient business statesmanship to avoid any such misfortune.

To bestir myself more energetically to achieve, and to fret less about reward.

To spend and be spent in worthy service.

To give full measure, running over.

TO ADHERE, THE BEST I CAN, TO THE GOLDEN RULE, BOTH IN BUSINESS AND IN SOCIAL LIFE.

To go about my activities with greater cheerfulness.

To be more considerate of others.

To be a good teamworker.

TO COMMEND MORE AND CONDEMN LESS.

To boost rather than bedevil.

To be an inspiration, not a wet blanket.

To pour oil on the machinery of my business rather than grit on it.

TO BE MORE OF A HELPER AND LESS OF A HINDERER.

To be a propelling force, not a brake.

To be to my business and to the world an asset rather than a liability.

To form a more definite, clear-cut purpose in life.

TO PUSH FORWARD MORE PAINSTAKINGLY, PERSEVERINGLY AND CONSCIENTIOUSLY TO ITS REALIZATION.

To squander less vitality, less time, less money.

To exercise more self-control, more self-reliance, more unselfishness.

To pay such attention to my habits that I won't have to worry about my health.

TO RECOGNIZE HOW MUCH I REALLY HAVE.

To curb more rigidly my temptation to be slipshod.

And, having done my best, not to be chagrined if the world does not pat me fondly on the back.

To talk less and do more.

TO TRY ALWAYS TO SEE OTHER VIEWPOINTS THAN MY OWN.

To sympathize more with the aims and aspirations of others.

To keep from drawing myself up in the shell of my own life, and to take sympathetic interest in what is going on in the world around me.

To develop courage so that no one can ever call me a quitter.

TO HAVE FAITH IN MYSELF AND NEVER FOR A MOMENT DOUBT MY ABILITY TO DO THE THING I WANT TO DO.

To sit down, all by myself, and take a personal stock-taking once a month.

To be no more charitable in viewing my own faults than I am in viewing the faults of others.

To face the facts candidly and unflinchingly.

TO ADDRESS MYSELF CAREFULLY, PRAYERFULLY TO REMEDYING DEFECTS.

To be not discouraged by past failures.

To attach as much importance to, and derive as much satisfaction from, a victory over self as any business victory.

To go in less for late, devitalizing hours and to utilize more the creative hours of the morning.

TO BESTOW MORE THOUGHT ON MY DUTIES OF CITIZENSHIP.

To seek to progress as a citizen as much as America has progressed as a world nation.

To revise my reading with a view to making it count more.

TO DROP SHOWY PRIDE THAT COMES OF LACK OF BALANCE AND TO CULTIVATE THE HUMILITY THAT COMES OF GENUINE WORTHINESS.

Lindy's Ma Forced Down Again

By International News Service.

STURGIS, Mich., Dec. 2.—The adventuresome trip of Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, flying to Detroit from Mexico City where she was the guest over Christmas of her distinguished son, was to be resumed from here as soon as weather permits.

The Ford-Stout all-metal plane in which Mrs. Lindbergh and her party are negotiating the trip, was forced down yesterday at Edwardsburgh, Mich., near here, by a terrific blizzard. The party came by auto to Sturgis to await abatement of the storm.

It was the second forced landing, occasioned by the storm, since the party took off from St. Louis Saturday on what was to be the last leg of the air journey to Detroit. At Whiting, Ind., the blizzard that has been raging over the middlewest, forcing the plane down and Mrs. Lindbergh spent Saturday night in Chicago.

Forty-five minutes after the party took off from Chicago Sunday morning the plane ran into the teeth of another heavy snowstorm. The plane made a perfect landing in a cornfield near Edwardsburg.

"We could not continue in the storm," Harry Brooks, pilot, said. "So we decided to land. A cornfield with long, even rows of cornstalks standing in the snow made a perfect landing field."

The party consists of Mrs. Lindbergh, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Stout, Mrs. John Collins, George Miller, Stanley Copeland, Harry Brooks and Harry Russell.

Like her famous son, Mrs. Lindbergh is determined to finish what she starts. She scoffed at the suggestion the trip be completed by train.

OUR MR. FRISBY'S FINANCIAL ADVICE

Alf Frisby, Mr. Frisby's nephew, who indorses Mr. Frisby's financial services.

By Mr. Frisby,

WHEN I was first approached on the matter of giving free financial advice to the masses, I slapped the editor just as hard as I could.

We scuffled a bit. Finally I changed my mind. After all, why shouldn't I give free financial advice? The editor could not answer.

"See here," said I, "there are dozens, yes, hundreds, probably thousands, and perhaps millions of penniless people who do not know which way to turn for their next meal—let alone their financial advice. They need help."

By this time the office force had gathered around and there was considerable cheering. I guess I lost my head. Anyway, I cheered, too, and we all had a good cry.

The next morning, after a Turkish bath, I pulled myself together and got to work. You could have heard a pin drop—it was that quiet.

(Tomorrow Mr. Frisby will have another article on Stocks and Bonds.)

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE d'ALROY

ON "BEATING GRANDMA!"

You can't BEAT YOUTH!
Age would perhaps LIKE to,
At times, but there is Something INVINCIBLE about
Youth, especially its LOOKS.
It seems the young EVE (and
Eve, of course, was ALWAYS
Young,) is very TIRED
Of her grandmother
Trying to IMITATE her.
Is that WHY, at night,
We see so many DEBUTANTES
With long hair and LONG
Skirts? Young girls know
YOUTH is as impossible to HIDE as old age, and
Infinitely HARDER to disguise.
Of course, Eve is not giving
Up her SHORT CUT to comfort,
The little KNOT that lies
Coiled at the nape of her
Slim NECK or over one or
Both ears is often perfectly
ADJUSTED to the time,
The PLACE, and the ENDS
Of her bobbed hair.
Next morning it may be
INVISIBLE, for it is
At night that all EVES use
Their deadliest WEAPONS.

BUGS BAER Says

A SOUR NEEDLE ON A SWEET RECORD

RUPERT HUGHES and Bill Thompson have finally settled their historical argument out of court. We don't know who gets the custody of the children.

The boys have compromised on a new American history which will please everybody. And enlighten no one.

Hughes has backtracked his detours and swallowed his own glossary. His tough gags about the papa of our hemisphere being a gin-head aroused the Daughters of the American Revolution to a man.

ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

The Mayor finally made Hughes admit that he never saw Washington gargle a snifter. This means the man and not the city.

George never threw a dollar across the Potomac. He took a three-cent ferry and saved 97 megs.

Grant didn't drink whisky by the barrel. He used a dipper.

Ben Franklin never flew a kite when he was 50 years old. It was his grandfather.

The Americans were not defeated on Long Island. We simply withdrew from a bad real estate proposition.

King George was suffering terribly in London while the American Army was enjoying the winter sports at Valley Forge.

The Yanks didn't run at Bull Run. They had bicycles.

Benedict Arnold's mistake at West Point was to give way the keys to the city before he was elected mayor.

The tea was tossed into Boston Harbor because we wanted to make Tommy Lipton's yacht feel at home.

In fact, America never had any more history than you would find in the south side of a child's building block. Our ancestors were handsome, brave, and when they got into battle they fought more fiercely than motion picture extras.

America has been in six wars and never lost one. We have a clean record, and we don't want Rupert Hughes scratching it up with bum needles.

Report of Zoning Board One for Public Approval

The first report of the Board of Adjustment, formerly the Zoning Board of Appeals, made public today, comes at a time when the public may see in all parts of the city visible evidence of the benefit derived from the zoning ordinance when backed up by the final decisions of the capable men who make up the Board of Adjustment. In effect the board is the administrator of the ordinance. Upon it devolves the duty of applying such elasticity of purpose and intent as the ordinance permits, and in this the importance of having men of such good discretion as those now on the Board of Adjustment is self-evident.

From the very nature of things, the beginning of zoning in Pittsburgh had to be experimental to a considerable extent. Time was needed to show what latitude should be given in considering the general provisions of the ordinance as applied to the various residential, commercial and industrial zones. It was to be foreseen that there would be specific cases involving problems. That they had been wisely considered by the Board of Appeals is made evident by the high indorsement given its members by architects, civic bodies and influential citizens urging their appointment as the Board of Adjustment a year ago.

Now the board makes its first report in words, but the public has had the report before its eyes in the shape of orderly construction which already has transformed Pittsburgh and which will continue to do so. Much as one finds to commend in the report of the board, the visual evidence of its good and wise decisions is still more satisfactory. This satisfaction must become greater with each passing year, especially those of the near future, for the greatest work of the Board of Adjustment is ahead of it instead of behind. Laborious and trying as the experiment days were, common sense carried them through. Now we face the future confident that good work of the past is assurance of still better work in the future.

The record of the board is one to which the public can give unqualified approval.

Gimbel Brothers Coming Is a Cause for Pride

There is a new name in the Pittsburgh business world—Gimbel Brothers. Yet, although Gimbel Brothers goes into the business directory as such for the first time here, the name is as well known to thousands of residents of Allegheny county as it is to the millions throughout the country, for the high reputation of this organization is nation-wide.

Tomorrow Gimbel Brothers embark in retail merchandising in Pittsburgh in the great department store at Sixth avenue and Smithfield street, in which the firm has been interested for two years but of which it is only now taking full control.

Pittsburgh is to be congratulated. Gimbel Brothers represents a firm that sprung from a small beginning and has survived to see immeasurable success crown a tradition of service. It represents a firm that has spread from one large city to another—Milwaukee, Philadelphia, New York, other cities—and now, Pittsburgh.

The Sun-Telegraph predicts for the new venture the same success that has attended the enterprise of Gimbel Brothers elsewhere.

Firm Stand Needed Against Propaganda From Latin-America

At Havana, within a month, American statesmanship will be put to a new test.

President Coolidge will go to the Pan-American Congress to explain the aims of his foreign policy, to defend his Latin-American program from the vicious assaults which have been made upon it and, presumably, to express the desire of the people of this country to maintain happy, harmonious relations with the world.

The fact that this man of cautious Yankee habits has decided to leave the shores of his own country while occupying the office of President, is in itself an indication of what he evidently regards as the serious necessity of his mission.

Peace and goodwill are commendable Christian virtues. But a manly insistence upon one's own rights has never brought contempt upon anyone.

Now that he has decided to go, President Coolidge should take with him to Havana the knowledge that the United States will be called upon to make greater sacrifices than any other nation which takes part in the conclave, that her prestige and wealth are the envy of the world and that malicious enemies have sought to undermine her influence throughout the great Southern Continent, whose integrity she has for nearly 150 years protected.

Much of this bitterness is artificial, stimulated by business rivals from across the ocean who are anxious to regain their once great trade by fair means or foul. The "friendly" neighbor directly South of the Rio Grande is known to have taken advantage of our diplomatic crises in Nicaragua and Tacna-Arica in order to arouse hatred for the "Northern Gringo."

The flood gates of hostile American propaganda were opened throughout the continent. We saw Mexican arms and munitions pour into Nicaragua, to be used against our own forces. We saw Pershing hanged in effigy in Tacna-Arica. We know that the Argentinian ambassador at Washington regretfully warned our government to keep our tariff experts out of the Argentine, because his own government was unwilling to guarantee their safety while the wave of anti-American hostility existed.

We saw the flood of hostile propaganda accuse us of dollar diplomacy. We saw it employ the Sacco-Vanzetti decision to arouse the passions of malice against us. We have lately seen the Mexican Senate propose the establishment of a new "Latin-American Confederation" into which the republics of the South could be united in a solid bloc of opposition to us.

The Old World regards the United States as a bumptious, strutting, Main-Street sort of a fellow, confident of his ability in internal affairs but callow, unsteady and uncertain in his foreign policies.

There certainly is sufficient of unfortunate experience to appraise us as such. We sunk our great battle fleet. Our "friends" sank none of theirs, except the old ships which had outlived their usefulness. We called a second naval parley, this time to reduce by treaty some of the ships in which our friends held superiority over us. Have you yet seen them relinquish that superiority? We entered another armament conference, this one to reduce the size of the standing armies of the world in which our friends greatly outrank us. You could not find with a telescope any army that has been reduced.

So, let us be done with astigmatism. Let us look at our foreign problems with eyes that can see straight. Let us be peaceful, but firm in our own right and unwilling to bend the pregnant hinges of the knee to any other power.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

The Polar Cradle

THE question is again debated of the origin of the aboriginal inhabitants of America. Representatives of the United States National Museum think they have found in Oklahoma evidence of the presence of man in America even earlier than the times of the Neanderthals and Cro-Magnons in Europe. If this is a fact how did those men get here? Did they, too, come across the wide ocean or the narrow strait?

We are living in such speculative times that it seems remarkable that the brilliantly imaginative theory of the North Polar cradle of mankind has dropped out of view.

It is one of those things that can be told by a picture more clearly than by words. Look at this skeleton sketch of the situation of the North Pole with reference to the three great continental lints of the globe—the Asiatic, the African and the American.

The center of the little chart is the North Pole. Assuming the human race to have begun its career there, the curved radii indicate how dispersion after some great change of climate, or other catastrophe, would naturally have spread men over the planet without the necessity of crossing wide oceans. All would simply have gone southward, for from the North Pole every direction is south. Of course on a globe the parts of the continental extensions beyond the equator would not be seen as shown, but would round under into the southern hemisphere.

What reason can be given for imagining that life on the earth may have begun at the North Pole? The question cannot be discussed here, but you will find it developed in a unique book, "Paradise Found," by William F. Warren, former president of Boston University, published in 1885. I can only call attention here to the following statement from a recent very authoritative text book of astronomy:

"In mid-summer when the sun shines at the pole continuously, the amount of heat received there per square mile during the twenty-four hours is twenty-five per cent greater than at the equator for the same area and time. If it were not for the great accumulation of ice at the pole, summer there would be hot."

That suggests in a flash why some persons have thought that our original ancestors may have dwelt around the pole. The idea is strengthened by what is known of the character of plant and animal fossils in the Arctic regions. They indicate that there was once a warm climate and abundant life there. What changed the climate? Nobody knows. Nowadays it would probably be said that the change resulted either from an alteration in the composition of the atmosphere, or from a change of continental elevation. In Dr. Warren's book the idea offered is that the Deluge described in the Bible and referred to in many ancient books and traditions independent of the Bible, was associated with a geological catastrophe that submerged a former land at the North Pole, which was the Eden of scripture and of tradition.

Once Overs

Don't Give Way

HAVE you allowed your standards of life to slump since you left the little home town and located in the big city?

Because you are not known do you think you can engage in pastimes which you would have avoided back home?

Are your ideals and your ideas being lowered by the class of persons with whom you come in contact in these city associations?

When you first reached the city you kept in mind that you were accustomed to associating with the best people in your village.

Now it is more difficult for you to meet the class you desire to know.

So you accept those who fall to measure up to your standard rather than wait until you can make the acquaintance of the men and women you enjoy most.

Don't you realize that the folks back home would be hurt to know you have degenerated?

The more serious aspect of the case may be that your taste is changing.

Have you reached the place where you enjoy the somewhat loose moral conditions of which you are a part?

Old Year Passing

THE old year, spent,
Dies out; content
I watch it pass away.
In Truth it wrought
Much good and brought
Glad hours for many a day.

When roses fade
Their leaves are laid
Within some well-loved book,
So old year's best
Within my breast
Fills up a treasured nook.

The old year goes,
Time's withered rose,
But still I do not sigh;
Its joys I know,
Its griefs let go
As New Year lights the sky!

New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Awakened by a hubbub in the hall and found my dog in desperate battle with an overcoat on the rack and seemed sheepish to find it was not a stranger. Then to breakfast and Theodore, the head waiter, told a sad story of perfidy.

So with Pierre V. R. Key, the music critic, to a pipe shop and a woman novelist was buying a thimble pipe for herself and somehow I felt effeminate. Thence to a laundry where I had high words but no satisfaction over a lost shirt.

In the evening to walk, falling in with a young policeman in the park and upon learning I was nearly twice his age felt so wretchedly old I went home and sat all evening in a melancholy. Finished reading Gallions Reach," a brave tayle, and to bed.

Continuing explorations of beauty secrets, I learn of a pulchritudinous prima donna whose formula is simple. She never touches water to her face, cleansing it only with cold creams. And once a year she goes on a diet consisting chiefly of vegetables, highly seasoned with garlic and onions. That gives a ruddy glow to the skin, to say nothing of the breath.

It is time for Dr. Frank Crane to reveal the secret of his complexion to those of us among the gents beginning to unravel and resemble dried up leather. Past 60, the doctor has skin so soft, white and babylike that the likes of it is rarely seen outside a nursery.

Also we ask to know what Oscar Shaw does to his hair to give that mirror effect. And how does Lowell Sherman make his evening dress tie look that way? And Basil Rathbone that jaunty effect to his pocket handkerchief? The trouble with fashion experts is they tell men what affects to achieve but not how to achieve them. It seems to be a knack. Among other excellent stage dressers are Holbrook Blinn, Harold Murray, Philip Merivale and Otis Skinner.

Jack Buchanon, the London actor, gave Broadway more new fashions in a short time than any person in the last decade. He was responsible for the double breasted dinner coat, the black silk dinner vest, the one stud shirt, the crush opera hat with the Tuxedo, black evening sticks with white knobs, skin-tight cuffs and striped trousers with plain business suit coats. Just a durn English dude.

The Steering Gear

By DR. FRANK CRANE

It is very important for an automobile to have power, which is usually applied to the rear wheels.

It will not go unless there is power applied to it.

But it is equally important that it should have good steering apparatus. It is vital for a locomotive to have steam, but it is just as vital for it to have an engineer.

To achieve success one must not only have the ability to go forward, but the judgment to go forward in the right way.

Men make good, as well as go to war, for various reasons. These reasons fall into two general groups. One is represented by a front-drive automobile, in which the power is applied to the front wheels and the car is pulled forward; the other by a rear-drive car, which is pushed forward by the power operating through the rear wheels.

Front-drive successes begin with a goal ahead. The striving is to attain it.

Men of this style set their eyes upon a house, a position, a girl, and seek to attain them.

The ambition takes definite form and is kept in mind.

The objective, giving the person something to work for, pulls him on.

Rear-drive successes are pushed ahead by the desire to leave something behind, whether it be the squalor of poverty or an undesirable opinion someone holds of them.

A natural-born genius at loafing may want so much to show his sneering mother-in-law that her daughter didn't make such a terrible mistake at the altar that he becomes a world-beater.

A whole line of Ben Franklins have started in to work harder than ever because some pretty girl has stood in a doorway and laughed at them.

The supercilious smile and the lifted eyebrow have often been the cause of set teeth and large accomplishments.

A feeling that someone thought "he didn't amount to much" has spurred many a person on to achieve just to show them.

"What will the neighbors think?" is a question that has pricked up many men, who would rather go fishing than cut the grass, to keep their places spick and span.

Rear-drive successes, all of these. One kind rises like water being drawn to the sun, the other like balls shot from a cannon.

What is ahead draws one; what is behind forces the other. The world doesn't care whether a man rides to achievement in a front-drive ambition or in a rear-drive one.

All who arrive are hailed alike.

Right Angles

By ALEXANDER CAIRNS

The Measure of a Man

OUR fluent and voluminous friend, Anonymous, has uttered an orphic that steps like a centaur:

"A man is known by the height of his ideals, the depth of his convictions and the breadth of his sympathies."

Suppose we adopt the resolution without shears or blue pencil, and attempt to interpret it with the help of the humanitarian pony.

Then the ideals, convictions and sympathies will be high, deep and broad respectively in proportion as they are humanitarian.

The world always makes demigods of her heroes because of their unsullied patriotism. The man who throws himself or his fortune into the breach to protect the helpless and innocent against the sword and torch of the oncoming avenger—such an one has ideals as high as the blazonry of the Aurora.

Some years ago a metropolitan Jew, as mild-souled as his kinsman from Nazareth and with a latitude of love as wide as the thoughts of his kinsman, the lens polisher of Amsterdam—this good Jew set down a bottle of milk at the doors of the poor every morning very early and reduced by 50 per cent the death average of the little ones. And that was saviourhood in its highest altitudes of idealism.

Men let ideals run through the fingers of their minds like children sifting golden sands by the seaside. But when ideals grip one like the vice of Vulcan then conviction is as deep as the unfathomed ether under the feet of the world.

A deep conviction is a wrestling Jacob crying to the angel, "I will not let thee go except thou bless me." The aboulia of the indifferent is an alias for lack of conviction.

The zeal of a task will eat a man up if he knows it is as right as a right angle. Let him be sure that the reality of his dream will set the joy bells ringing in the soul of the outcast world, and the grappling tentacles of a devil fish couldn't hold him from his work.

The Greek word "sympathy" has a Latin sister, "Compassion." "Sym" and "Com" mean "with," and "Pathy" and "Passion" mean "to suffer." So that both sympathy and compassion mean to suffer with.

That's reaching to the last inch of humanitarianism in the fellow-feeling that makes the whole world kin. Old Walt Whitman stressed the idea to the point of paradox when he said, "I do not sympathize with that man; I am that man."

Ideals of infinite height; convictions of measureless depth; sympathies of boundless breadth!

It is the measure of a man.

Old Age in It

OLD ladies used to sit by the fire and knit. Now they go up in airplanes, take an interest in politics and dance the new ballroom stuff. Old gents, who used to nurse their rheumatics and oil their squeaky joints, now get married again and race motor boats.

Now Mrs. Juanita Lopez, aged 118, has had herself vaccinated for fear that some day she may contract smallpox. We hear much these days of "surging youth," but youth will have to surge some to beat the old folks. The latter have recently discovered the fact that they have the right to live as long as they can, anyhow.

LISTEN, WORLD! ELSIE ROBINSON Says: You Can't Be Free

"WELL, what do you really want?" I asked Stanley. Stanley is 20. Unhappy, restless. Can't get along at home. Hates school. Wants — wants — doesn't know what he wants. So I asked him.

"I just want to be let alone," he blurted. "Let alone to work things out for myself. I don't want to be bothered by other people all the time. I want to be free."

"I want to be free"—we've all demanded that. And we have all demanded it in vain. WE CAN'T BE FREE, AND THERE'S A VERY GOOD AND NECESSARY REASON WHY WE CAN'T BE FREE.

Go into your yard. Pull up a tuft of grass. See how the delicate roots are entangled with earth. The grass draws its life from the earth. There, in the dirt, are stored the essences of countless other lives which have gone before. The grass roots feed on those essences as you feed on the food in your pantry.

From time immemorial that brown earth has been the pantry for all living things. Everything feeds on it—in one way or another—grass, trees, turnips, flowers, insects, reptiles, birds, beasts, Man.

EVERYTHING IS ROOTED. NOTHING IS FREE.

That is the law for a tuft of grass. That is the law for a Man.

You have more roots than a blade of grass. Your body has roots which go back and back into the dirt beneath your feet. But your mind and spirit also have roots which go out and out into the human lives about you—and beyond them to the Universal Source of Energy.

You are entangled with all those other lives—and they are entangled with you. You feed on those other lives—and they feed on you. They are your soil.

The grass dies if it is uprooted from the soil in which it lives. YOU DIE IF YOU ARE UPROOTED FROM OTHER LIVES. Your body may persist, for your body is but a bigger vegetable, but your mind and soul will wither without their proper food.

That is why we can't be free.

That is why we must "always be bothered by other people."

Stop fighting against that fact. Stop thinking how great and noble you would be if you could live all alone and do as you please. You wouldn't. You can no more detach yourself from the scheme of things, and succeed, than the grass can detach itself from the earth, and succeed. Stop tugging at your roots. Stop trying to get away from the common, grubby facts of life. Accept them. Feed on them. That's what they're for. Dig your roots in deeper. GROW!
